Foreword

Some Words to the Spiritual Apprentice

You might be asking yourself "Why do you need a book like this?," or, "How could you possibly use a book like this?" Answers to questions like these are complex. Think of this as an introductory phrase book for a language about the qualities of time and space. Think of this as a book similar to one which you would buy to learn some French, Japanese, Arabic, Pashto, or Turkoman phrases. Books have the power to open you to new ideas. Books have the power to expand your daily vistas. Books have power, and when used, books can confer power. This is a book which can help you gain understanding and insight into certain parts of everyday living.

This book is about a way of thinking which can help you organize the activities and things of everyday life. This book helps explain a small part of astrology. Astrology is a practice which can help you understand something about time and space. In school you are taught history, grammar, math, science, social studies, etc. But, only life teaches you that there are good times and bad times for doing certain activities, or that you can be in a good space or a bad space. Schooling doesn't teach you how to recognize such times or spaces. This book can help you understand something about this part of life. To learn this, you must realize something about the handy categories astrology provides for sorting the things of life. This book is a learner's manual on these invisible divisions of space and time.

How can this book do this? This is a book about ideas. At once this book opens you to ideas both in English and in astrology. This book can help teach you how to translate the everyday objects of your life into the symbols that astrologers use. Is learning this of any use to you?

That, of course, is a more difficult question to answer, and it certainly depends on your personal circumstances. This book can't help you if it sits unused in a room, on a shelf, in a closet, or packed away. It can't help you if you don't work with it. It can't help you if you are not interested in astrology. It can't help you if you think that astrology is nonsense, or the work of evil or incarnate spirits. Thoughts like those have nothing to do with this book.

This book is, simply, a book. It is a book about some studied and collected ideas on certain areas of astrology. If you feel that starting with these ideas can help you understand life better, why you feel the way you do, or why you meet people who act like they do, then maybe this book can help answer some questions. No book can really answer such questions, but maybe this book can help you look at and identify the inner feelings, urges or pushes which lead you across one day of life after another. Life always raises questions. It is up to you to provide the answers. And today's correct answers are not necessarily tomorrow's correct answers either.

The hardest part of starting to study a new subject is knowing what questions to ask. It is so difficult not to blatantly flaunt your ignorance before others. Sometimes you just want to be accepted and loved. Sometimes you want to learn all of these new ideas immediately. There are no shortcuts in life. Impatience is not easily cured, and instant knowledge is available primarily for foolish or superficial people. A seeker is a person who asks questions about life. If you ask questions like what is life about or how can you cope more effectively with the world's demands, then this book is essential for you. This book doesn't give answers, but it does provide many keys which can help you find answers.

Considering yourself an astrological novice does a disservice to you. You are the world's best expert on a very important subject: you. It is with you that any study of life should start. The hardest people to interest in astrology are those who are not interested in themselves. Complacent people who are satisfied with life's lot, people who shun inquiring within, people who quote pat answers for life's complexities, or people who have few interests in exiting their daily rut, are people who benefit little from new answers. An aspirant is someone who questions life or its rules, or asks questions about issues which lie beyond the obvious rituals of living. For these people, there are no stupid questions. There are only inquiries which can open doors. Their questions help shed light on life's little mysteries.

Tolerance of self breeds satisfaction. Questions about the life's processes beget searches. Inner restlessness about the superficiality of life's existence spawns searches for meaning. Probing into personal motives gives rise to questions about godhood. Thirsting for spiritual satisfaction calls forth difficult choices about instant pleasure vs. longer term satisfaction. Life doesn't provide answers, you do. But without help, without study, or without inquiry and work, questions can not be answered.

This book contains many keys to help you translate the stuff of everyday life into universal symbols. No more and no less is promised. If this promise tweaks your inner self, then this book begs you to buy, use, and work with it. Where you stand with life's social status, or where you are in your study of astrology has nothing to do with satisfying a restless curiosity. Satisfying those needs is your responsibility. Maybe you can begin that here.

Preface

HOW THIS BOOK BEGAN

Capturing and recording keywords is a never-ending task. Ideas and words just keep popping out of the air and into the text. Eventually you reach a point where you yell "Enough!," stop, and declare the work finished. But, it is never really finished — and inwardly you accept that. Words keep cropping up, worming their way in, spreading themselves like lures before the author and compiler. Language is an interesting field of endeavor.

This book grew out of frustrations: frustration with not having a large enough vocabulary; frustration with not being able to differentiate between subtle shades of word meanings; frustration with not knowing life well enough that words could be placed with their appropriate astrological symbolism; frustration with not being able to differentiate between astrological planetary symbolism, the sign symbolism, or house symbolism; frustration from finding so much incorrect or just otherwise inaccurate astrological information; frustration with the format and layout of similar works; etc. Much time and hard work went into pacifying such frustrations.

The book was great fun to compile. The way it just grew, and formed, and shaped, and changed, and grew again was a fascinating and happy experience. I lost count of the number of times I thought enough words had been included. But, the words just kept coming. Too many good, new ideas and words just kept screaming for inclusion with their mates. In every book or article read, every conversation, every new idea I was exposed to, etc., prime words, ideas, or entries just kept appearing. Words were the ultimate deciding factor though. Growth was finally just halted at just under 14,000 words. When reviewing the manuscript one friend said: "Too many words!," while another said: "Not enough words." I knew then this was the time to stop the compilation. The house description written accounts were added after the word compilation was completed. These write-ups were intended to complement the word lists by giving each house a different perspective and insight. Underlined words in the opening chapters show definitions. Any particular word placement or assignment can be argued ad infinitum. The choices made when assigning the words represent my best and most studied judgment. Often, hours went into agonizing over individual word assignments. I understand if your opinions differ. Such is the stuff of life.

This book is something to be used, cherished, expanded, personalized, etc. Look for words or ideas in here. If you can't find your word, then look for a synonym. If you can't find that then try a root idea (like: food, housing, clothing, etc.), until you do make an association. Have fun running your mind through this book and its ideas. Good hunting and good exploring.

Chapter 1
Astrology and Keywords

INTRODUCTION

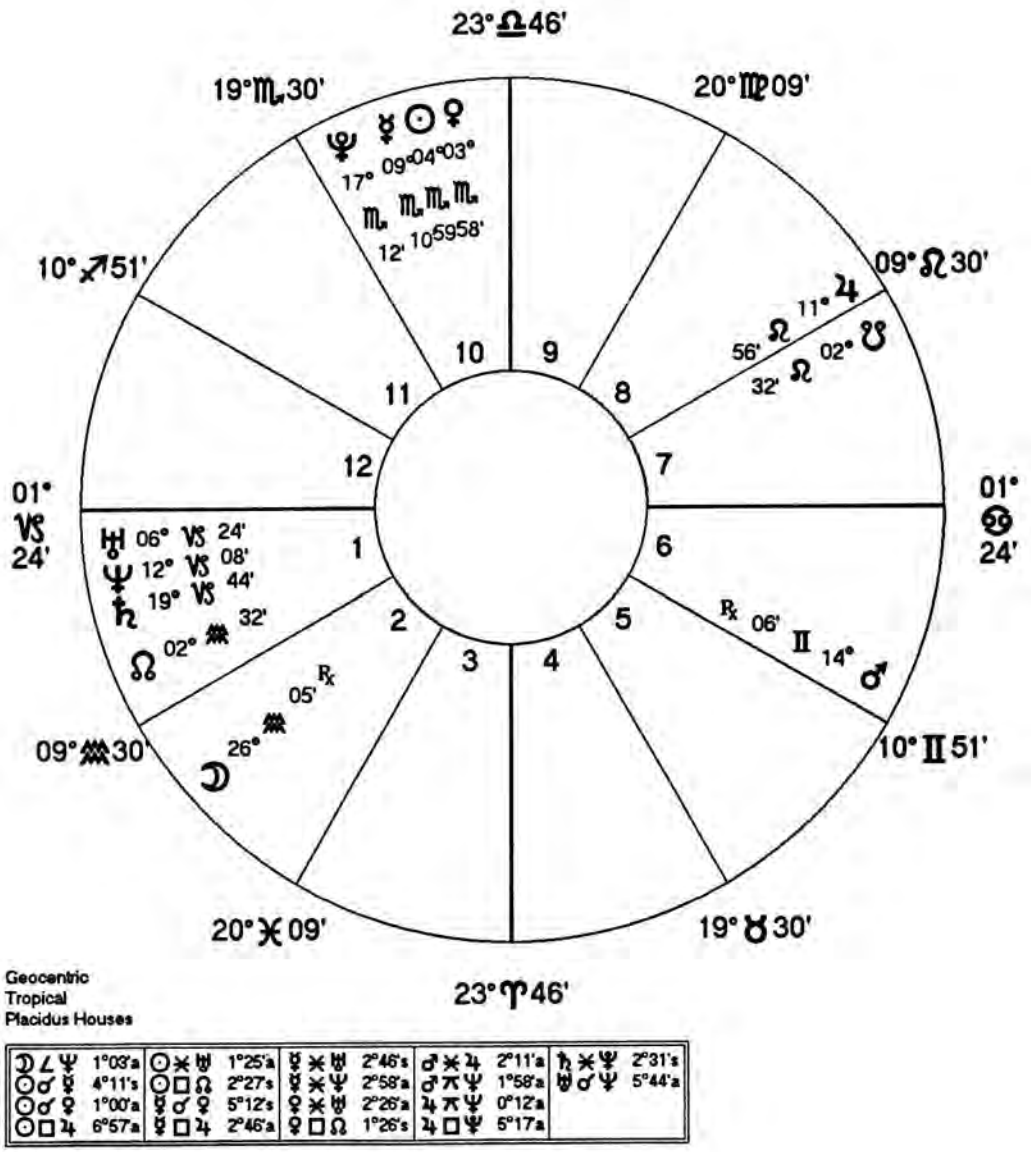

This is a book about the houses of astrology. But it is also more than just a book about houses. This is a book about keywords for the houses. But it is more than a book about keywords. This is both a reference book and a textbook on the astrological houses, their meanings, and keywords or ideas associated with the houses. But this book also includes ideas about the astrological quadrants and hemispheres, how to choose a house system, and the mathematical formulations for many described house systems (you can probably impress your friends by showing them these even if you personally don't relate to math). This book contains many ideas. It began as a book about house keywords, but other information about the theory and usage of houses politely asked to be included, and was accepted, expanded, and worked into the text. Read the text to learn about houses. Use the keyword sections and references to expand your knowledge about the meaning of the houses, and use the parts on the quadrants and hemispheres to expand your knowledge about astrology. This book is like three books in one. Use it, and don't forget that there are always parts of this work which beg you to explore.

Keywords are the core words or ideas you use in your thinking and communicating. Keywords are the bridge between everyday language and astrological symbols. Keywords are crucial for astrological work. Learning the meanings behind astrological symbols is a never-ending pursuit and requires a good grasp of powerful keywords. Astrological symbols are ancient, yet filled with profound substance. They convey a deep and subtle heritage. Through habit you use personalized keywords daily to define and explain yourself. This book can help you translate astrological house meanings into popular words and ideas. This book can also help you tie many common English words and expressions to the astrological houses. Houses, the topic of this book, lend important shades of meaning to astrological interpretations.

Few tasks are more difficult for an astrologer than blending meaningful keywords with the current chart symbols and patterns. The astrological chart, often miscalled the "horoscope," is a symbolic diagram of the heavenly bodies. The chart is an astrologer's primary working tool. Technically, a "horoscope" is the marker of the First House, now often associated with the Ascendant, but a horoscope can be more than just the Ascendant. It is any market that is used to

Astrologers look for patterns among the symbols in a chart. While the patterns in a chart may seem random to a casual observer, astrologers interpret the order behind their complexity. Learning to read and use these symbolic patterns requires learning both their rules and keywords. To see the order which lies behind a chart you should learn that there are simple and direct ways of translating astrological patterns into daily working thoughts and expressions. An astrologer's job is to learn to read such universal patterns and symbols and to translate them into meaningful everyday language.

A chart is used by astrologers to show universal information in a compact way. The first part of learning to read charts is understanding that astrology uses seven distinct, yet related, symbol sets to create the patterns within a chart. The seven astrological symbol sets are named planets, signs, houses, aspects or harmonics, the personal sensitive points, fixed stars, and long precessional cycles. These symbol sets help make up a chart's patterns. Once you learn what a chart looks like and how to draw or erect one, then your next step is to learn the names and symbols of the parts within each symbol set. Next you should learn how these sets are interrelated and communicate meaningful information among each other. Then through practice you should learn to translate these symbol sets into a common and everyday language. This is done by learning good keywords (or ideas) and then linking these into your daily expressions. But, recognize that just because the various parts of astrology can share information, this does not necessarily mean that each exclusively rules or owns that information. Houses have their distinct core meanings, signs have their core meanings, planets have their core meanings, etc. This book is about the keywords, meanings, and theory of the astrological houses, quadrants, hemispheres. Ideas on the philosophy of house systems are also presented.

THE ASTROLOGICAL SYMBOL SETS

Astrology begins with planets. Planets are the most important symbols used in chart interpretation. Astrologers popularly use ten planets. Listed in their traditional astrological order, the names of the planets are Sun, Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto. Astrologers refer to the Sun and the Moon as planets although astronomers do not. Planets have been known since our earliest times and a person with normal vision may be able to see Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, or Saturn on a clear night. Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto are not visible directly by eye and were discovered using telescopes and other means around the years 1783, 1848, and 1930. Astrologers define a planet as a heavenly body which psychologically mirrors defined activities, circumstances, qualities, or situations. Many planetary-type bodies exist in space but only the major planets listed above are given an astrological rulership or connection with the other parts of astrology. The planets are the major 'gods' or 'goddesses' of our ancestors and their mythological affinity and portrayals are told in ancient stories. As used in this book, the word body can mean a planet(s), personal sensitive point(s), the Moon's or a planet's node(s), star(s), asteroid(s), etc.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

The planets are ordered according to the hierarchy given in the following table. The planets each have unique two, three, or four letter and symbolic abbreviations and these are (reading down the left hand column and then down the right hand column for the correct planetary ordering):

Sun	SUN, or SU	☉	Jupiter	JUP, JU	♃
Moon	MOON, MO	☽	Saturn	SAT, SA	♄
Mercury	MER, ME	☿	Uranus	URA, UR	♅
Venus	VEN, VE	♀	Neptune	NEP, NE	♆
Mars	MARS, MA	♂	Pluto	PLU, PL	♇

The signs of the zodiac, or signs, are equal divisions of space along the ecliptic in a narrow band of sky referred to as the zodiac. The zodiac is a narrow band of the sky close to the path of the Sun in its yearly travel. The signs of the zodiac are different from the constellations in the sky, although unfortunately some constellations and signs share identical names. It is chiefly within the zodiac's boundaries that the planets travel (Pluto wanders out at times). Reading down the left column first and then into the right columns for the correct order, the signs of the zodiac, their letter and symbol abbreviations, and their offset in degrees from their Aries starting point are:

Aries	ARI, or AR	♈	000	Libra	LIB, LI	♎	180
Taurus	TAU, TA	♉	030	Scorpio	SCO, SC	♏	210
Gemini	GEM, GE	♊	060	Sagittarius	SAG, SG	♐	240
Cancer	CAN, CA	♋	090	Capricorn	CAP, CP	♑	270
Leo	LEO, LE	♌	120	Aquarius	AQU, AQ	♒	300
Virgo	VIR, VI	♍	150	Pisces	PSC, PS	♓	330

Popularly the signs each have one or two planetary rulers, or one ancient and one modern planet. The planetary rulers of a sign have a strong affinity for that sign, and astrological characteristics between the planet and sign are passed back and forth between the planets and their signs. This rulership association allows astrologers to draw planet and sign analogies. All rulership associations are astrologically important. The planets in the following table are purposely placed in two distinct columns. Some signs are shown with one planetary ruler and some with two. Notice that Mars has an affinity with both Aries and Scorpio, and Venus has an affinity with both Taurus and Libra, etc. The most commonly accepted planetary rulerships are:

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Sign	Rulers: Yang	Rulers: Yin	Sign	Rulers: Yang	Rulers: Yin
Aries	♂	♆	Libra		♀
Taurus	♀		Scorpio	♆	♂
Gemini	☿		Sagittarius		♃
Cancer	☽		Capricorn		♄
Leo	☉		Aquarius	♄	♅
Virgo		☿	Pisces	♃	♆

The planets each have dual sign rulership affinities and lend either a yang or a yin flavor to their signs. This yang or yin division by each planet is astrologically important. It is mirrored in the unfinished columns above. The ordering of the planets in the columns above (down to up, or, up to down) shouts loud hints about completing the order of this matrix. Analogies between signs and planets can help with astrological interpretation. For example, if the Sun is in the zodiacal sign of Cancer, then the combination of Sun and Moon can be activated, as Cancer and the Moon are matched above. Another example: Venus in the sign of Capricorn, blends astrological keywords for Venus and Saturn, or Saturn and Libra energies, etc. The implications of this planetary duality are left unexplored for now.

Houses symbolically represent the qualities and division of space in a chart. Astrology has many different ways to divide space and show spatial divisions in a chart. A very popular method of house division is called 'Placidus' and is named after a professor of mathematics who lived in the 18th century. The Placidian house system was printed by a British publishing house in the early 1800's and for over one hundred years was the only table of houses available to astrologers. Thus it gained in popularity and usage due to its exclusive availability, and is now, by far, the most requested house system today according to people who run computer based public astrological chart services. Chapter Five presents some ideas on why you may want to choose one system of house division over another.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

In the astrological literature some twenty-four house systems have been described. Appendices A and B describe all popularly known systems. All house systems have a unique role in astrology depending on the circumstances of their use. Houses are formed in one of three ways using the ecliptic, equatorial, and horizon astronomical planes in space. Regardless of the house system chosen the individual houses are traditionally referred to by a number and are called houses one through twelve. Houses have a direct one-for-one relation with the signs of the zodiac, and through them with their ruling planets. The first house relates to the zodiacal sign of Aries (yang Mars and yin Pluto), the second house to the sign of Taurus (yang Venus and yin Psyche — I use a planetary body which is not the asteroid with the same name), the third house to Gemini (yang Mercury and yin — I use the Ebertin's identified planet Transpluto, which I call Vulcan, whose positions are given in their ephemeris), and so forth through the twelfth house which relates to Pisces (yang Jupiter and yin Neptune).

Aspects or harmonics can provide a rich and varied insight into all situations. Aspects or harmonics are the angles in space between planets or the personal sensitive points. Often, the planets and personal sensitive points when taken together are just called points. The difference between the term aspect and the term harmonic is that aspects are called by names (e.g., conjunction, opposition, trine, quintile, sesqui-quadrate) while harmonics refer to the same angular separation but call them by their equivalent numbers (one, two, three, five, eight). The numbers are easier to pronounce, but aspect names are more traditionally used. Modern preference is to use the word harmonics, but each term — aspect, harmonic, or angle — refers to the same angular separation of planets or points in space.

The following relationship equates the planets with the harmonics. The following table is read down the left column first for harmonic numbers one through six and then down the right column for harmonics seven through twelve.

Aspect Name	Angle	Harmonic	Planet	Aspect Name	Angle	Harmonic	Planet
Conjunction	0°	1	☉	Septile	51° 26′	7
Opposition	180°	2	☽	Semi-Square	45°	8	♂
Trine	120°	3	♃	Novile	40°	9	♆
Square	90°	4	♄	Decile	36°	10	☿
Quintile	72°	5	☿	Undecile	32° 44′	11	♇
Sextile	60°	6	♀	Semi-Sextile	30°	12	♅

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

The angles shown above are found by dividing the 360° in a circle by the number of the harmonic, where conjunction is one, opposition is two, trine is three, etc., as shown. The seventh and eleventh harmonics have a fractional or non-integer angle. People familiar with music theory will recognize much harmony (harmonics!) within this table. Multiplying these basic angles repeats the harmonic. That is, three times the decile, or 3 times 36°, gives 108°. Thus, two planets separated by 108° of zodiacal longitude exchange energy at a decile or Mercury vibration. Such integer multiplication gives many important angles beyond those just listed in the table above. Such repeats or multiples of the basic harmonic are called repetitions. The repetitions carry the same astrological theme as the basic harmonic. The number of the repetition does not seem to be important (i.e., a separation at a decile angle or three times the decile still carries a decile meaning, etc.).

Other special combinations of angles, like the sesqui-quadrate (at 135°), and the quincunx or inconjunct (at 150°) also exist in traditional astrology. The sesqui-quadrate is a special case of the 45° aspect or the eighth harmonic, which relates to Mars. The quincunx is a unique aspect which is formed by the division of a fractional (non-integer or real) number into 360°. The harmonics listed above are formed by whole or integer numbers. Harmonics with real numbers are also valid. Harmonic theories are exciting and show very powerful ways of finding astrological significance. Other harmonics beyond those mentioned or discussed here may also determine planetary or point activation. Exciting possibilities are offered by the squares or cubes of the basic integers, by the midpoints of the planets equated to harmonics, etc.

The personal sensitive points and harmonics remain the most unexplored area of astrology. Seven personal sensitive points (PSPs) are recognized and the Node of the Moon can be considered as an eighth personal sensitive point. The personal sensitive points are called by the name shown in the left column in the table which follows and their opposing paired point in the right hand column is always understood to be opposite in the heavens from the named point. The personal sensitive points exist as two opposite placements in the zodiac. They depict intersections of psychologically important reference points in space and represent the qualities of time. The personal sensitive points provide symbolic references for sunrise, noon, sunset, and midnight. Their locations are defined by combining the Earth's position in our Solar System, a place on Earth, the day of a month and year, and the time of that day in an astronomical way. The names of the personal sensitive points, their abbreviations and their equivalent paired point are:

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Primary Name	(abbrev.)	Paired Name	(abbrev.)
Ascendant	(ASC, AS, A)	Descendant	(DSC)
Midheaven	(MC, M)	Lower Heaven	(IC)
Equatorial Ascendant	(EQA, EQ)	Equatorial Descendant	(EQD)
Vertex	(VTX, VT)	Anti-Vertex	(AVX)
Co-Ascendant	(CAS, CA)	Co-Descendant	(CDS)
Polar Ascendant	(PAS, PA)	Polar Descendant	(PDS) and,
The Aries Point	(ARI, AR, Ar)	The Libra Point	(LIB, Li)

The Node of the Moon can be logically included with these personal sensitive points and its name, symbolic abbreviation and its opposing point is:

North Node	(NN, NNod, ☊)	South Node	(SN, SNod, ☋)

Although the personal sensitive points always exist as opposing pairs which lie across the chart, only one side is popularly used as the point's name. The side most commonly referred to is listed in the left-most column in the table above. When using the personal sensitive points it is important to remember that they exist as a pair of locations lying across the zodiac, and do not occupy single positions in a chart like the planets. Figure 2 shows how the important astronomical circles lie in space and how some of the personal sensitive points are formed by the intersections of these circles.

LEARNING ABOUT HOUSES

Interpreting a chart requires the development of complex astrological skills. Interpreting a chart involves translating the astrological symbol sets into an everyday language which you or your astrological client can understand. The chart presents much information. It is easy to get lost between what the individual symbols represent and how to extract information from the overall chart diagram. Typical questions asked when a person first sees a chart seem simple, yet are profound. How does Jupiter influence this chart? How does the eighth house affect this chart? What does Jupiter in the eighth house mean? Answering questions like these may require both experience and some deep thought and reflection.

This book lists keywords associated with the astrological houses. Houses operate on two distinct levels. On one level, houses represent reality. This can be common objects of life, the types of people you experience, places, etc. Objects are the common things you touch and see as you go through life books, tables, chairs, floors, walls, our home spaces, etc. The people types you encounter involve all of the labels you attach to people because of their profession, their dress, habits, or mannerisms, such as executive, thief, laborer, politician, weirdo, rancher, lawyer, etc. The twelve astrological houses symbolize and divide these obvious things of life. These categories help you place the people and objects of daily living into a symbolic perspective which begins your trip of astrological understanding. House categories at this level are particularly important when answering questions (Horary Astrology), choosing appropriate times to begin activities (Electional Astrology), or working with governmental, political or business events (Mundane Astrology). Seventeen separate house categories are described in this book and others could be created.

On a second level, houses represent inner psychological attitudes and feelings. Natal Astrology and Compatibility Astrology (Synastry) use houses this way. Natal Astrology uses a chart for helping a person understand inner drives and yearnings. Natal Astrology helps bring answers about who you are, why your life is important, what you should be learning or doing, etc. Astrological houses can provide important psychological insight into these patterns of life. When reading a natal chart an astrologer may start by reading the patterns of the planets in the houses. Patterns showing some houses empty and other houses containing one or more planets quickly bring a focus to areas of life where meaningful exchanges can occur. By combining keywords for the planets along with keywords using the other parts of astrology, important chart themes can be described. Discovering these themes by combining appropriate keywords defines astrological chart interpretation. It also takes a lot of practice to do this easily.

Compatibility between people (synastry) is an emotionally complex subject. It involves judging the potential interaction between people, e.g., man and woman, parent and child, boss and employee, person and pet, friend and friend, siblings, etc. The astrological comparison goes beyond the interpretation of one chart, because now the inter-action of one person's planets, signs, personal sensitive points, etc., in the chart of the other person is examined and delineated. This requires a level of chart delineation experience beyond the simpler natal interpretations. Also, people in relationships may live at different psychological levels of awareness about life — and this too complicates the process of explaining the interpersonal synastry.

Because houses have a dual role — representing both the deeper psychological symbolism and the common things of life — they hold perhaps the greatest single storehouse for astrological keywords. Houses have the richest keyword treasury and their depth is mostly untapped within other astrological works. Thoroughly learning houses can enrich your overall astrological knowledge. This book was written to help you learn more about house symbolism. Hopefully this book can help bring some new insight into astrological keywords which the houses represent.

Some astrologers choose not to use houses, claiming that houses are not well defined in either their derivation or interpretation. Other astrologers use planets different from the traditional ones listed earlier. Experience has shown that the standard ancient symbols provide a wealth of adequate information, and that the modern usage of asteroids, comets, unknown planets, etc., amplify the basic information already provided by the basic patterns in a chart. Both students and practitioners are encouraged to learn the traditional astrological basics thoroughly and practice them daily. May this book be of much use to you in this regard.

Chapter 2
Keyword Theory

HOW TO USE KEYWORDS

Keywords are the stuff of life. Without a good grasp of at least some basic astrological keywords you cannot correctly and clearly interpret the symbols or patterns in a chart. Simple and fundamental rules for using keywords have been developed. Evolving these rules was not easy. They took years to develop and clarify, but can now be explained in minutes. Such is the plight of a pioneering researcher. Good astrological keywords do not appear magically. They are the result of years of searching and sifting through many different sources.

Astrology is a language like English is a language. Both have their form of vocabulary and syntax. English vocabulary has nouns, adjectives, adverbs, verbs, pronouns, prepositions, etc., as its parts of speech. Any good dictionary shows you the part of speech for each word listed. The vocabulary of astrology is the seven symbol sets shown earlier for the planets, houses, signs, etc. Study those tables again in Chapter One if the symbol sets are not yet completely familiar to you.

In English we use phrases, sentences, paragraphs, chapters, etc., to string parts of speech together to convey information. In our speech and writing we string our thoughts together with grammatical rules which govern the creation of phrases, sentences, etc. English has many grammatical forms. Here is one example: "Nice day!," Jack says. The phrase "Nice day!" conveys the meaning of Jack's idea, and the words "Jack says" completes the formal sentence structure by adding the subject and verb of the sentence. The phrase Jack used, "Nice day!" contains an adjective and a noun. The combination of adjective and noun in English is the simplest basic expression for conveying information. For additional information on English grammar and syntax you should check with an appropriate reference book.

Astrological grammar is used to combine the astrological vocabulary of the seven symbol sets into meaningful statements. The grammar of astrology is much simpler than the grammar used when speaking or writing. There are only seven rules of astrological grammar — or, there are only seven grammatical combinations within any chart. That is, any chart pattern can be broken down into these seven fundamental parts regardless of how complex any chart pattern seems to be.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Astrology has seven grammatical forms used for conveying information. One is planets in signs. The astrological symbols "☉ ♎" convey an idea similar to the "Nice day!" idea, which Jack expressed in his sentence above. Since we always understand that the universe speaks to us through astrology, the equivalent of "Jack says" is not a required form within the astrological grammar.

ASTROLOGICAL GRAMMAR

The seven grammatical parts of astrology are:

- Planets in signs
- Planets in houses
- Personal sensitive points in signs
- Personal sensitive points in houses
- Signs on house cusps
- Midpoints
- Planets in aspect

Every astrological combination in a chart can be broken down into these seven parts. For instance, the astrological statement ♄ ♍ 12th ☌ A ♍ ☍ ♂ ♓ 6th (which is read Saturn in Virgo in the twelfth house conjunct the Ascendant in Virgo, all in opposition to Mars in Pisces in the sixth house) is a very complex expression. The translation of those written astrological symbols into everyday language could occupy the whole chapter of a book. Yet even as complex as that astrological statement is it can be broken down into its respective parts:

- Saturn in Virgo
- Saturn in the 12th house
- Saturn conjunct the Ascendant
- Ascendant in Virgo
- Mars in Pisces
- Mars in the 6th house
- Mars opposition Saturn
- Mars opposition the Ascendant

Once this breakdown into component parts is done each part can be interpreted separately. Then these partial interpretations should be combined into a whole and coherent thought to present the overall astrological theme.

TRANSLATING ASTROLOGY IN ENGLISH USING KEYWORDS

English uses nouns, adjective, adverbs, verbs, etc., to convey information. Astrology uses planets in signs, planets in houses, etc., to convey information. To learn how to interpret astrology effectively, we must learn how to move easily between the parts of astrological grammar and the parts of English grammar.

The simplest form of any English language statement has an adjective and a noun combination to convey information. "Nice day," "large book," and "funny line" are English adjective and noun combinations. "☽ ☊," "♃ 5th," and "M ♊" are astrological combinations. To translate between astrology and English, or between English and Astrology, we need to correlate the nouns, adjectives, etc., with planets and sign, planets in houses, etc. This is not so difficult to do.

Planets can be represented by either nouns or adjectives. Signs can be represented by either nouns or adjectives. The personal sensitive points can be represented by either nouns or adjectives. Therefore, to interpret a basic astrological statement like "♃ ♑," we can string adjectives for Jupiter and nouns for Capricorn together, or we can choose adjectives for Capricorn and nouns for Jupiter (our choice) and get meaningful English phrases. Five practice words appear in each category below for combining keywords:

Jupiter Adjectives	Capricorn Nouns
additional	procedures
generous	seriousness
accepts	respect
sufficient	correctness
increases	ambition

Combining, at random, any one word from the left column with any one word from the right column we can get adjective and noun phrases which can be used to describe some sides of Jupiter in Capricorn. Here are some examples:

generous ambition sufficient respect an increase in procedures additional correctness increasing seriousness accepting ambition

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

In general the adjectives of column one were combined with the nouns of column two to give meaning to Jupiter in Capricorn. The word "frase" has been coined to describe these phrase-like combinations. The individual frases are not meant to be particularly meaningful by themselves, but when a group of frases are taken together, they begin to form a picture of the shades of meaning behind "Jupiter in Capricorn." Linking words required by good English usage (prepositions, conjunctions, pronouns, articles, etc.) can always be added to the word combinations because English requires these for grammatical sense but astrology has no equivalent for these linking words. In the same way the gerund of the verb form on some of the words in the list was used to convey information (e.g., increasing seriousness). Astrological grammar is simpler than English language grammar. Astrology has fewer and different parts of speech. Concessions to the rules of English grammar for readability do not alter the important basic concept that English adjective and noun words can be combined to bring everyday meaning to astrological patterns.

ASTROLOGY AND ENGLISH EQUIVALENTS

The seven grammatical parts of astrology listed earlier can now have their English language parts of speech assigned. The seven parts were

- Planets in signs
- Planets in houses
- Personal sensitive points in signs
- Personal sensitive points in houses
- Signs on house cusps
- Midpoints, and,
- Planets in aspect

Planets in signs can be represented by adjective and noun combinations. Horary and Electional Astrology tell us that houses represent the "things" of our everyday lives, like cars, purses, money, irons, toasters, chairs, etc. But, "things" are always nouns in English. Since planets can be represented by either nouns or adjectives, then planets in houses can be represented with adjective and noun combinations also.

The personal sensitive points behave just like the planets. They too can be represented by either adjectives or noun words. For all practical purposes the personal sensitive points and the planets can be considered together as one part when discussing astrological grammar. The personal sensitive points in signs and the personal sensitive points in houses can also be represented by adjective and noun combinations in English. Here is an example of how to do this from the breakdown listed before:

Ascendant Adjectives	Virgo Nouns sensory	services
mental	compliance
personal	precision
perceives	neatness
reacts to	efficiency

Combining these adjectives and nouns, we get Ascendant in Virgo frases:

mental compliance
a perception of efficiency reactions to (create) neatness precise sensory (observations)

Some of these frase combinations were deliberately altered to show the flexibility of expression allowed by this method of translation between astrology and English. The English language has many ways of allowing you to express the same idea while using different words. This adaptability is one reason why it has evolved into a language used worldwide. "Reacts to neatness" is an acceptable frase, but a slight language alteration to the frase "reactions to (create) neatness" is still an acceptable translation.

Six of the seven grammatical parts of astrology are represented by adjective and noun combinations. Signs on house cusps are represented by adjective and noun combinations. So are midpoints. Since planets can be represented by either adjectives or nouns, then adjective planet to noun planet combinations are acceptable ways of creating meaning for midpoint combinations. To decipher the linguistics behind the seventh part of astrology, planets in aspect, requires more creative thinking. In an aspect, a planet, or one of the personal sensitive points, lies at a significant angle (the aspect) to another planet or point. For planets in aspect, the initiating planet makes an astrological connection which is carried at some aspect or harmonic wavelength to the receiving planet. Thus there are three parts to an aspect: an initiating or modifying element, a transmitting principle, and a receiving object. By the rules of English grammar and traditional usage nouns receive actions, verbs convey actions, and adverbs modify verbs. Therefore, planets in aspect can be represented by adverb, verb, and noun combinations.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Planets can take either a noun or adjective form. When used in aspect combinations planets can also be used as adverbs. Aspects (or harmonics) use verbs as their parts of expression. Knowing this the entire English dictionary can now be divided by the parts of speech indicated therein for each word! If a dictionary word is a verb it takes on an astrological aspect or harmonic expression. If the word is an adverb it represents a planet. If the word is an adjective then it can represent either a planet, personal sensitive point, or a sign. If the word is a noun, then see if it is a noun thing or a noun attribute. If it is a noun thing the word rightly belongs to the houses of astrology. If it is a noun attribute the word may be related either to planets, signs, the personal sensitive points, or sometimes houses. Such attribute words can be shared among the astrological modalities. This completes the dictionary's word apportionment! This is a book primarily about English language words used as nouns and their placement as keywords in the astrological houses.

HOUSE, SIGN AND PLANET KEYWORD SHARING

Houses share keywords and ideas with both signs and planets through their correlation with the signs of the zodiac, and also the planets ruling these signs. This idea of keyword sharing is well known yet little is written about this process. The rules for keyword sharing are straightforward. For example, Mars rules Aries, and Aries has an affiliation with the first house (this analogy continues with the Venus and Taurus affinity for the second house, etc., through all twelve houses — the specific correspondences were shown in earlier tables). Mars traditionally rules action and activity and, well, martial things. Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary defines martial as "of, relating to, or suited for war or a warrior; ... experienced in or inclined to war (see: war-like)." Mars was the ancient god of war. War involves activity, action, and movement, and Mars astrologically rules such ideas. Through its affinity with Aries, and Aries with the first house, keywords like action, activity, movement, etc., are assigned to the first house.

Carrying this analogy further, keywords about the implements of war-like actions, armaments, munitions, etc., acquire a first house association. This leads to words with similar concepts like knives, sharp edges, etc., which acquire a first house rulership. However, the first house also is traditionally related to the person being inquired about. Therefore words like you, your intentions, the self, etc., are also placed in the first house. In a similar fashion, words for all houses can be assigned.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Houses represent the tangible things of life. Tangible, touchable or real things are nouns. Words like money, purses, knives, daughters, aircraft, etc., are nouns. Houses also represent abstract noun trait ideas, like communication, self-worth, marriage, debt, solemnity, etc. Mercury rules communication and shares this idea with the third house. Thus noun words which indicate less tangible ideas, like communication, home life, pride, sharing, ethics, etc., can also share house affiliations. It may be difficult to separate out which words should be assigned to the planets or signs and which specific words should be assigned to the houses. Therefore, as many practical, everyday noun words as possible were included in this book on the assumption that a clever reader could always associate some of the less tangible ideas with other astrological modalities like planets and signs.

Chapter 3
Words Abounding . . .

WHERE DO KEYWORDS COME FROM

Astrology has a rich heritage which has been accumulated over centuries of practice. Most astrological writing does not translate this legacy well into modern speech. This book attempts to combine the traditional astrological heritage with the thousands of words which have become our modern language idiom. The words given here were mainly accumulated by copying words from dictionaries and thesauruses by shade of meaning into this book. Lists of words in other astrological texts were not used as a primary source for this text. Much effort was spent to ensure that this work remained original yet did not significantly differ from traditional astrological writing. Some words are listed in their singular form and some in their plural form. Either form is acceptable, depending on usage.

The strength of this book lies in the richness and diversity of its words. It has many (but not all) of the ideas and concepts mankind has incorporated into 20th century thinking. One weakness of this book is that it is difficult to cross check ideas to ensure consistency of expression. Some ideas which are close in meaning may be assigned to different houses when they should be in the same house. Every effort has been made to ensure consistency and remove duplications.

This book is a collection of nouns for the astrological houses organized into seventeen commonplace categories. Future books may give keywords for the planets, signs, the personal sensitive points and the aspects. This book began because it was needed. Earlier keyword books were difficult to use and missed much of the psychological richness which astrologers associated with houses. The Astrological Thesaurus Book 1: House Keywords attempts to correct this lack.

HISTORY

Collecting keywords began because of my dissatisfaction with the amount and arrangement of astrological keywords found in earlier astrology books. Astrologers talked at one set of keyword depth but wrote at another. In the beginning my collected keywords were divided into astrological categories. First words were hand written and then manually typed. By 1982 the typed keyword list had grown to over 3000 words. It was fun to create. Using it was both fun and informative. It sat unchanged until 1989 because having been typed on a manual typewriter there was no easy way to sort that list of words into alphabetical order. By 1990 personal computer technology had advanced and the manually typed word list could be electronically scanned, entered into a data base package (FoxBase was used) and sorted. Thus in 1990, for the first time, a comprehensive look at the original word list in any order desired could be made. Further, a word processor interface could be used to add new words, or correct or change the old entries.

After the original list was sorted and entered, errors and duplicate entries were discovered and corrected. Then other words began to appear. Words were grabbed from newspaper articles, magazine articles, discussions, conversations, advertisements, etc. Anywhere words were used, new ideas worked their way into this list. Many friends encouraged the publication of the word list. The original list was added to, improved and updated. Much care was used in the words selected and used in this list. Generic ideas, such as "fruit" were included, but specific ideas like types of fruit: bananas, apples, peaches, pears, plums, etc., were not included. Generic ideas like electric appliances were included, but specific ideas like irons, toasters, etc., were not included. Excluding lists of specific items provided better overall readability. Also tree or plant species, flower types, city names, etc., were purposely not included. Many good words were found by reading sequential entry after entry from dictionaries and thesauruses. This book is the end result.

KEYWORDS AND RULERSHIPS

It is one thing to collect words, it is quite another to assign astrological rulerships or categories to these words. There are two ways to assign an astrological category to a word. The easiest is to find a word with a similar meaning and then associate the new word into the same category. The second is to use derived houses. As an example of the first method, use the traditional fourth house astrological rulership of land. Modern word substitutes for land, such as "back yard" or "living space" can thus be assigned by inference to the fourth house. This same line of thinking can be applied to planets and signs when looking for house associations. As an example, Saturn traditionally rules stoppages, therefore a word like "stoppers" (as used in a sink drain) has a Saturn connotation, and because it is a thing of life is assigned to the tenth house. The tenth house, as was noted in Chapter 1, is ruled by Saturn. The word "plug," which is a synonym for "stopper," also has a tenth house rulership assigned. Remember that an astrological rulership denotes an affinity with, not possession of, the idea or word.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Rulership is a tricky concept. Astrologers spend a lot of time trying to find the proper rulership of an idea or trait. Finding the correct rulership is important because once that key is found it opens the chart to interpretation. Using an incorrect rulership can waste a lot of time. Correct rulership assignment of astrological ideas gives an astrologer the key to unlocking a chart. That is one reason why this book is an important astrological tool. Without some guidance as to where to begin with an idea, a thought, a phrase, a concept, a pattern — much time can be lost. This book provides a wealth of ideas to help astrologers at all levels find the key between words and their astrological correlations.

DERIVED HOUSES

Another way to assign words to houses is called "turning the houses," or "derived houses." The practice of derivative houses is commonly used in Horary or Electional Astrology. It blends house ideas by combining two or more house meanings. For example, the second house traditionally rules money and the fourth house rules land. Thus, money you receive from land or land holdings is denoted by the second house from the fourth house, which is the fifth house. An easy way to calculate the derived house is to add the two original house numbers and then subtract one from the result. For this example, 4 + 2 - 1 = 5, or the fifth house. You subtract one because the original house, in this case the fourth house, is always the first house of itself. When calculating a derived house of a derived house, remember to subtract one for each level of deriving. Thus, the money your maternal aunt earns from her land uses the 6th (maternal aunt), 4th (land), and 2nd (money from) houses, minus 2 for the level of deriving a house of a house of a house. The math looks like 6 + 4 + 2 - 2 = 12 (the twelfth house). One variation occurs when the addition results in a number greater than twelve (for traditionally there are only twelve houses). Distant travel is ruled by the ninth house and partners are ruled by the seventh house. Therefore, distant travel by one's partner would be ruled by the, 9 + 7 - 1 = 15th house, which, subtracting 12 for the number overage, is the third house. Using derived houses can open new astrological insight. Many word concepts assigned in this book were formulated using this derived house concept.

The first house symbolizes the theme itself, the second house the use of that theme, the third house communication within or about that theme, the fourth house the origin of the theme, etc. Taking a concrete example for how ideas can evolve by turning the houses, we can examine the concept of "military" which has a sixth house traditional rulership. Thus, the result or use of military leads to war, which is a seventh house concept. It can also lead to peace if military is used defensively, and peace is also a seventh house concept. Military communications would be ruled by the eighth house; military bases (the home of the military) the ninth house; pride in the military by the tenth house; military strategy by the eleventh house; enemies of the military by the twelfth house; military destruction by the first house; military overseas bases by the second house; military reputation by the third house; military legislation by the fourth house; and scandals within the military by the fifth house. Other concepts are formed in the same way. You can use houses of houses of houses. For example rulership of money spent on your sister's pet dog's illness would be calculated by third house for sister — plus — second house for money spent — plus — sixth house for pet dog — plus — sixth house again for illness. Thus, 3 + 2 + 6 + 6 - 3 = 14th house, which, after subtracting twelve, becomes the second house. The second house rules the money spent on the illness of your sister's pet.

Another important way of assigning words to houses is by planetary or other rulership association. In Chapter 1 lists of planets, signs, etc., and their traditional planetary rulerships were given. Thus, Mars rules Aries and Scorpio, Venus rules Taurus and Libra, etc. Aries is traditionally associated with the first house and an Aries keyword is "aggressive actions." Thus the psychological noun keyword "aggression" can be associated with the first house through its relationship to Aries. This type of thinking, analysis, and development was applied to thousands of words in this book. If you are interested in becoming a better astrologer then you should cultivate keyword association skills like this.

House keywords are relatively easy to assign given a bit of practice with words in general. Midpoint word rulers are more difficult to assign because midpoint word mixtures involve combining words from two sources into a single concept. Normally, for planets, signs, houses, etc., single word concepts suffice, unless you are combining concepts by turning the houses as discussed previously. Midpoints are always combinations of at least two ideas. Sorting midpoint ideas always involves a double action, one for each word in the description. Please see The Concept Dictionary for a comprehensive listing of words and their midpoint rulerships. Another book, Midpoints: Unleashing the Power of the Planets, helps translate astrological midpoint concepts from the astrological language into English.

THIS BOOK'S ROLE

This book was intended to be used as both a reference work and a learning tool. It was intended to be an invaluable reference for teachers, students, researchers and casual practitioners of astrology. This is a book which asks to be used, not kept hidden away. When properly used this book can help you learn more about the practice of astrology.

This book provides many keywords for the astrological houses. Keywords for planets, signs, aspects, etc., may be addressed in other books. This book is divided into three major parts: the house section list, the category related list, and the alphabetical list. The house portion of the book contains the house keywords by category preceded by a short write-up on each house. The alphabetical section contains the keywords in a computer sorted alphabetical order. The category related list allows you to reference all keywords within their category, except the "things" topic. To reference the house things in alphabetical order, please use the alphabetical listing. If you have trouble locating a word try the alphabetical list. If it is still not in the alphabetical list, then try a synonym for the word.

Reading the opening house write-up may help you gain insight into more important psychological meanings of a house. Words in bold face type are key ideas of the house. The keyword section is useful as a Horary or Electional tool but can also serve as a learning guide for all areas of astrology. The house write-up serves as an introduction to some of the concepts which a house exhibits. It is best to both read the write-up and also examine the particular section of the house keywords which currently interest you (e.g., psychological associations, places, occupations or person types, etc.) It is the combination of all of the book's resources taken together which may help you develop your own working concept of the house and its meaning to you. The idea of using all of the book's resources taken together is important. Use them to help you understand houses better.

After the short write-up the keywords included are divided into seventeen categories for each house. The categories for each astrological house, in the order, they are presented in this book are:

- Horary or Electional Ideas — the key ideas
- Things
- Psychological Qualities
- Occupations or Person Types
- Places associated with a House or Home
- Family Members or Close Relations
- Mundane Ideas
- Parts of Our Body or Body Functions
- Afflictions or Diseases
- Colors
- Gems or Minerals
- Animals
- Mythical Figures or Constellation Names

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

- Parts of an Organization
- Parts of an Automobile
- Parts of a House
- Parts of a Ship

The ideas presented within the categories listed above should be self-explanatory. "Parts of Our Body or Body Functions" lists things like fingers, arms, legs, toes, breathing, etc. "Psychological Qualities" should be read with the connotation of "need for," or, "sense of," where appropriate. "Parts of a Ship" lists bow, stern, wheel, navigational lights, etc. "Family Members or Relations" lists family members like father, mother, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, etc. Sometimes a word is listed in more than one category. This helps include similar ideas within different categories. Other words may seem to apply in different categories but may be listed in only one category. A word is usually listed in more than one category if that word both strengthens the category and helps you follow the keyword ideas better. The animals included were correlated with both the Chinese and traditional western astrological assignments.

The following categories: "Parts of Our Body or Body Functions," "Afflictions or Diseases," "Occupations or Person Types," "Places," "Colors," and "Gems or Minerals" can be associated with either astrological signs or houses. They were included in this house listing because they are noun things. But, using these ideas with their appropriate sign or planet equivalent is acceptable. The keywords in this book, and especially the keywords in the psychological, body, or affliction sections, are not medical recommendations, nor are they meant to be a substitute for sound medical advice or tests. They are astrological rulership notations only. For medical or psychological advice of any kind please consult a competent and authorized practitioner.

The words and ideas found in the "Horary or Electional Ideas" section are traditional. This section is expanded to include more modern ideas too. The "Things," "Psychological Qualities," "Occupations or Person Types," "Places," and "Family Members or Relations" categories also derive from traditional sources, but were augmented by words obtained from reading a dictionary and thesaurus through and including those words which seemed to be appropriate. Most other categories are not defined well in traditional sources and represent new work. Mundane words are traditionally associated with Business, Political, or Historical usage.

The "Gems and Minerals" section derived from formal notes taken from classes with certified gemologists. This was augmented by college courses in crystals and the crystalline structures of metals and gems. After many other abortive attempts to classify gem and mineral groups, their crystalline structures and color variations were used. From this work, assignment into the twelve working categories was done. This work is based on the author's original insight.

The "Occupations or Person Types" category is to be used with care. House strength in a natal chart does not necessarily imply that you are locked into an occupational selection for only that house. The occupation you choose has little to do with the rulership of any house over an occupation. It has a LOT to do with the overall talents you have and how you wish to exercise those talents. If you have a talent for working alone, have physical strength, etc., then you could just as easily apply yourself to being a wild animal trainer as being a day laborer. Both occupations require these talents. There is a great difference in the social connotations, the specific skills required, the working circumstances, etc., between these occupations however. The occupation you choose in life should be based on your preferences, your talents, your schooling and your overall chart skills — not on the rulership or planetary placements of any one house or sign in your natal chart. There is a big difference between the rulership of an occupation and the choosing of an occupation. Rulership categories for occupations are included for reference purposes — not for choosing occupations for self or clients. By knowing an occupation's rulership a skilled astrologer is better able to correlate that occupation with the chart(s) being studied. Employers hire the entire person for a job, not just a person's house rulerships.

The "Mythical Figures or Constellation Names" category was created because the idea of myth is very important in our human heritage and an astrological reference list was needed. This section lists the names of the constellations in the sky, mythical Gods or Goddesses, etc. It was easy to include such ideas under the houses with the understanding that these things or people might also be associated with astrological signs, harmonics or planets. Primarily Greek and Roman gods, goddesses or mythical figures were included. Persons or ideas from other religions and cultures may be included later. Much work remains to be done to develop this category, but this list provides a start. The house assignments were based solely on the author's study and perceptions of this subject.

USING THIS BOOK

The entries in this book are designed to be easy to follow, almost self-explanatory. However some explanation of how to read or use the entries is needed. If another word is shown in parenthesis behind the lead word then take the meaning of the lead word to follow in this direction. A few examples from the book might help you see how to read and use the entries. Practice helps you gain familiarity with any new tool.

bow	since the category is "ship" then this is the bow of the ship bow (weapon)	as in bow and arrows
bow	as in "a hair ribbon" — see also accessory or cloth
bow	as in "bow-wow" was not included; see "loud things" for the noise, or see "dogs" for the animal bow - to take a	(e.g., on a stage) see also praise, adulation, etc.
box seats (theater)	the word "theater" helps place the idea brushes (in general)	e.g., hand brushes; hair brushes, dust brushes, etc.
causes - attachment to	should be read as "attachment to causes."

The question of where to place the ideas denoted by mother and father causes disagreement among astrologers. Some astrologers feel that mother belongs to the fourth house and father to the tenth house; while other astrologers feel that mother belongs to the tenth house and father to the fourth house. Some astrologers separate these ideas into "the nurturing parent" (assigned to the fourth house) and "the disciplining parent" (assigned to the tenth house). This complicates things further because in some families the nurturing parent and disciplining parent may be the same person. This book associates the idea of mother with the fourth house, and father with the tenth house. These houses were selected because of the Moon's (i.e., mother image) association with the fourth house and Saturn's (father image) association with the tenth house. If you need different house placements then please adjust the relevant words for all mother and father ideas. To do this reverse this book's house location for not only mother and father, but also each associated idea, such as "mother's kin" (i.e., for a house reversal swap the sides of the chart for each house, the twelfth house becomes the sixth house, the first house the seventh house, etc.)

The sort order for the words used is a computer standard sort order. That is, special characters (like periods, parenthesis, etc.) sort first, then numbers, then capital letters and then lower case letters. Spaces between words are counted in the sort order, so words like "backhoe" and "back hoe" would sort the word "backup" between them. Sometimes the plural of a word will appear last in the sort order. Sometimes the plural of a noun may come after an intervening different noun than its singular version. One example is the word "spy" which alphabetically sorts considerably after its plural "spies." Some of the entries are in a singular form and some are in a plural form. Whichever form seemed best for the entry was used, but wherever possible the singular form was used. In general either the singular or the plural form of an entry may be used. Please check for both the singular and the plural of each word before ending your search. Any duplicated word entries within the same category are unplanned, but some words and ideas are duplicated across the categories for easier reference.

The alphabetical category lists all keywords in this book. Entries are followed by a code and a number showing which category and house rules that entry. Typical entries look like:

exposure (lay bare)	Th	05
exposure (vista)	Th	09
expressions of emotion	Ps	05
extra	Oc	05
eyes	Bd	01

These entries have two parts: the word or phrase entry and the code entry. The word entry describes the intended keyword idea. A key is printed at the bottom of each right hand page, and at the front of the alphabetical section: Th = thing; Ps = psychological quality; etc. In the above list you can find "expressions of emotion" in the fifth house in its "psychological qualities" category. You can find "eyes" under the first house's "body" category, etc. The word "extra" is taken in an occupation or person type sense and refers to someone performing as an extra in, say, a movie. You can see that there are two ideas for the word "exposure" included: exposure in the sense of vista is a ninth house concept, while exposure in the sense of laying bare has a fifth house affinity.

This book has both an instructional side and a fun side. The instructional side is used when scanning and reading the book's word lists. You can learn much about the meanings of the houses in various departments of life by doing this. The word lists contains words which should both educate you and expand your knowledge of the houses in general. Look through the alphabetical section and see the rich diversity of words and how subtle shades of word meaning can change the house rulerships of those words quite quickly. One example is "shortening (abbreviating)" associated with the third house, or "shortening (fat)" which is associated with the twelfth house.

Fun comes from the games you can invent using this book. When in a class or a group you could read three words from a house entry (usually in the order presented in the book — but the sequential order of the words read is not important — also you can skip around in a house's word list) from one of the book's lists and then ask the others which house was associated with those words. For instance "impressions of others, indecision, and inequitable things" are three words associated with the seventh house. Going through such word groupings helps you can gain better insight into the individual house meanings. The discussions which ensue from games like this can be very educational. This is a great game to break up the tedium within any astrological classroom setting.

What should you do if you can't find the word or concept you are looking for within the house you reference? First, reference the alphabetical list in this book to see if your word is in the book. Often words are assigned into a house which may at first seem wrong to your thinking. Much thought was given to the placement of each individual word in this book. The house placements suggested in this book are not random or contrived — nor were they copied from existing sources. Indeed, copying them from existing sources would have resulted in the chaos of having multiple rulerships for the same idea, and this was one pitfall that was deliberately avoided. If you don't find your word in the alphabetical list, then try a synonym of your word to see if that is listed in the alphabetical list. If you still can't find your word(s), then try some ideas or concepts which have similar meanings. Then try combinations of words or word ideas which have similar meanings. If you still can't find your word, then write it into your copy of the book.

Words were assigned to houses in this book only after considerable thought for each placement. Years of astrological testing with clients, discussions with other astrologers, reading other astrological material, etc., have been used to create the word placements used in this book. The testing of these word placements with other professional astrologers has shown that there is very little controversy about most house word assignments. You personally may differ with the placement of a word, and therefore space is provided for you to write in your comments, notes or ideas.

Use this word list in your everyday astrological work. Make notes about the words which you use but can not find in this book. The words in this book are nowhere near as important as the final learning process you go through to improve yourself as a person.

Chapter 4
Quadrants and Hemispheres

OVERVIEW

Some unknown cosmic mechanism ties the position of the planets in space and time to events on Earth. We may not understand how this works, but there is evidence that it does. The astrological quadrants mirror one part of this effect. Quadrants are a four-fold division of space and time surrounding an event which occurs on Earth and within the Solar System's spaces. Quadrants tie and divide a particular time and space into the available planetary energies. Quadrants (and the astrological hemispheres — a two fold division) are divided by the sensitive points, e.g., the Ascendant (ASC), MC, etc. The chart pictures this spatial division for a particular time and place. A chart is erected to show how the planets are oriented in space and time. Once drawn it is available for reading or interpreting. The process of reading or interpreting a chart is called a delineation.

A very important part of chart delineation is determining the individual phases of each planetary cycle which the person, business, or event is experiencing. The chart can show a Mars phase (a two year cycle — all cycle times given are approximated to the nearest year of cycle length), a Jupiter phase (twelve years), a Saturn phase (twenty-nine years), a progressed Moon cycle (twenty-nine years), a Nodal cycle (nineteen years), Solar Arc cycles (every twenty-two and a half years), etc. It is helpful during delineation to see where each of the bodies (planets, personal sensitive points, etc.) lie in their phase of development. The astrological quadrants and hemispheres naturally divide these important planetary cycles into meaningful sectors. The quadrants and hemispheres are marked by the personal sensitive points and thus are sensitive to the time of day for which the chart is erected. People born only a few moments apart on the same day can be at different phases in their transiting or progressed cycles. Important times in these cycles occur when the bodies cross the quadrant delimiters. These times of life should be noted and studied.

The traditional method of using a four-fold division of time and space is described here. Astrological quadrants exist for every chart erected regardless of whether or not they are used. This chapter introduces you to some important concepts about these quadrants and their possibilities. Use the quadrants and hemispheres for marking the phases of development within life for the charts you are studying and you may find this practice to be worth the time invested. The cycles of life and how each of us experience them is a very important astrological concept. Unfortunately, this important topic is often treated lightly in other works.

QUADRANTS

There are four traditional parts to life's daily cycle. These are marked by midnight, sunrise, noon, and sunset. These four markers are so basic to the psychological division of our daily lives that they often pass unnoticed. Yet they serve to divide and order the regimen of our days and the events and circumstances of our lives in ways beyond normal cognitive sensing. Traditionally, midnight is the division of one day from the next; sunrise is the start of our working day; noon is our meal or rest break; and sunset is the traditional end of the working day. These same four psychological markers divide the chart into the astrological quadrants and hemispheres.

Charts include seven important astronomical circles which derive from three astronomical planes in space. Together these are used with the planets and signs to construct the chart's framing. Regardless of whether you draw a chart by hand or use a computer to print it out, the act of creating a chart incorporates these circles and planes into a symbolic diagram. The three planes (listed alphabetically) are the

- ecliptic
- equator
- horizon

The names of the seven circles (listed alphabetically) are the

- co-equator
- Earth's equator
- Ecliptic
- horizon
- meridian
- polar axis circle
- prime vertical

Astrological tradition creates a chart's quadrants by using the horizon and the meridian circles. Quadrants using the prime vertical and equatorial circles should also prove to be important, but research on them is lacking. Use of the co-equator and polar axis circle is almost nonexistent. Certainly there is room here for much future investigation and development. The traditional chart is divided by the horizon into an upper and lower hemispheres, each of which contains two quadrants. The meridian similarly divides a chart in an eastern or left part and a western or right part, each of which also contains two quadrants. The superimposition of the horizon and meridian divisions gives the quadrant system most popularly used.

QUADRANT NUMBERING SYSTEMS

Quadrants are numbered counterclockwise because the planets move in that direction. But the daily rotation of the Earth, and thus the daily movement of the chart, proceeds in a clockwise direction. There are different ways to number astrological quadrants. One popular method starts at the Ascendant and goes counterclockwise from quadrant one to four. This is a commonly described approach to numbering quadrants and it derives from the numbering scheme in general usage with the houses. Its disadvantage is that it starts from the sunrise point and not from the midnight point, which both traditionally and through keywords portrays beginnings. A more natural method is to use numbering which starts from the midnight point and proceeds counterclockwise through the quadrants. The advantage here is that it starts with the traditional astrological point of "beginnings" and also it ends its cycle with the traditional point of "endings" (both points are at the IC). The numbering scheme starting with the midnight point is advocated and described further in this book. Please examine Figure 3, which depicts this quadrant unfolding.

There is another advantage to starting a quadrant numbering scheme with the fourth house cusp and placing the fourth, fifth and sixth houses in the first quadrant. The traditional keywords assigned to the houses better follow with this method. This approach also more logically follows the unfolding of human experience within life's cyclical events. Further, the transits, solar arcs, and progressions of the major planets through the quadrants can be naturally followed and interpreted. Examining the development of a thought, project, idea, etc., through a complete chart cycle of the quadrants can help you see how the houses themselves lend their traditional flavors to the inception, development, attainment, and adaptation phases of this natural quadrant division and numbering scheme.

QUADRANT AND HEMISPHERE DEFINITION

Cyclical events in life have a beginning or starting point as well as an ending point. These starts and ends should occur from the same point in order to maintain continuity. Traditional astrology assigns the key concept of starts and ends to the IC, or the cusp of the fourth house. The quadrants describe a natural scheme of growth and evolution in one's consciousness, education, social skills, or work abilities. Often the working of these cycles pass completely unnoticed on our conscious level. The cycles and the developments they promote often proceed completely beyond our daily involvements with satisfying the demands of living. It is usually, and then only in retrospect, that we are able to realize that a cycle has begun, developed, unfolded and passed. Whether consciously noticed or not, the process continues and affects all phases of our life's progress.

In the beginning one's schemes are started and work is done to define and structure tasks. This occurs during the first quadrant of astrological cycle, and draws from the fourth, fifth, and sixth house energies. The fourth house is your roots, your beginnings and your base of operations. The fifth house represents creativity and the fun you can have in exploring life. The sixth house represents the personal dedication which you choose to put into your projects. Thus this combination of energies placed in the first quadrant serves as an excellent set of energies for fueling a cycle's inception phase.

The ascendant - descendant line separates the sixth and seventh houses and the first and second quadrants. The second quadrant expresses the ideas behind development through the seventh, eighth, and ninth houses. This quadrant continues the growth begun in the first quadrant by focusing your needs on gaining support from others for the activities already started. Working with and through others helps expand any individual efforts. Seeking others out, gathering support, and expanding the scope of events is directly related to the seventh, eighth, and ninth house concepts. When the second quadrant cycle is completed, the development phase should have reached the peak of its evolution and projection into the external world.

The second quadrant involves promoting interest in your ideas and activities, finding financing and support for your interests, and then setting your purpose forward for others to examine. The second quadrant phase draws upon the seventh, eighth, and ninth house energies. The seventh house describes partnership arrangements and criticism. It represents those with whom you choose to ally with for your schemes. The seventh house also represents those who choose to oppose you or interfere with your work. The eighth house represents the resources other people can bring to help you, and how you allow others to interfere with or modify your inner creations. The eighth house also represents any lessening of scope, as well as restructuring of ideas which you should accommodate. The ninth house represents the many variations which can arise from the path set for yourself, as well as your ability to sell your idea to others. The ninth house embodies the core of your idea and how well it may be received by others.

The third quadrant contains the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth houses. It marks the start of the halfway point through the quadrant cycle. The momentum built through the first half of your cycle reaches its apex and is now ready for further testing. At this apex of progress you may receive some reward or recognition for your efforts so far. The third and the fourth quadrants help you capitalize on the fruits of your previous labors. If your efforts have been poorly defined or prepared so far, then this half of the cycle may be trying. If you have prepared well and worked your ideas and schemes through, then the last half of this cycle can bring you many rewards — both tangible and intangible.

The tenth house helps you concentrate on building your career and reputation based on activities started during the previous two quadrant phases. Through the tenth house you confront the question of how to use the power associated with what you are developing, while in the eleventh house you gather others or organizations to comment on and then maintain your schemes. In the twelfth house you have returned to you what you have given to others through the earlier parts of this cycle. The twelfth house offers you an opportunity to make some restitution or changes in your thinking or approaches (i.e., your direction can still be adjusted and/or changed if such is warranted).

During the third quadrant phase the concepts put forth earlier bear fruition and your reputation is called into focus. You gather whatever support from others is needed to promote your schemes and maintain them. Then you await feedback from this society, be it good or bad, on whether or not your scheme is worthy. These developments correspond to the traditional keyword meanings of the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth houses. The tenth house represents your reputation and honors received. The eleventh house is the societal support you receive or can muster. The twelfth house is either the compassion you show to others, or the compassion you receive from others. The twelfth house is also where you must face any self-undoing energies which you have set in motion during the cycle.

The fourth quadrant's influence calls on you to reflect inwardly on what you have done and determine whether or not you have accomplished your inner goals. This final phase of inward application and thinking (or rethinking) of the approaches and the dissemination of your schemes shows how you have absorbed the lessons of your cycle of activity. This is the final phase of the overall cycle and is necessary for the reflection and inner absorption of the lessons learned during the cycle's operation. During the fourth quadrant phase you must stand alone, apart from others, to determine for yourself the worthiness (or lack of it) of previous efforts.

The fourth quadrant helps you reflect on what has been done, and to grow or not grow from this on a personal level. Here too you have the opportunity financially to benefit (or lose) from the cycle. The fourth quadrant, through the third house, also gives you the final say about the experience of the entire cycle and what may or may not be published or disseminated to others before the next cycle begins. The fourth quadrant, then, is an introspective or quiet quadrant where you are left alone to face your own creation. This too is in keeping with the meanings of the houses of this quadrant although not in such a direct and obvious way as in the other quadrants. In some recent astrological works the inner reflection possibilities of the first, second, and third houses have been neglected.

It may help you when delineating a natal chart to note how the planets are arranged in the quadrants. A person with a strong second quadrant planetary emphasis will have personality thrusts quite different from a person with a strong fourth quadrant planetary emphasis, etc. While noticing this arrangement within the quadrants is not the answer to all personal motivations it can help in understanding why some people are driven by the actions of others while others are driven only by their own inner callings.

Astrologically the zodiacal sign of Aries is associated with the first house, and the keyword relationship of Aries with initiating and pioneering efforts shifts these meanings to the first house too. The first house is usually associated with keyword ideas like the self, you or your nature. Tradition places the beginning and ending of cyclical activities with the fourth house. Realize that the first house with its Aries association does not carry the implication that efforts are also started with Aries. "Beginnings" and "endings" have traditionally been associated with the fourth house cusp or IC, and an over-emphasis of the zodiacal sign keywords with the house keywords may have caused a shift for the beginning of cycles to the ascendant.

Astrological tradition tells us that there is a relationship between signs and houses, but there is not necessarily an interchange of keywords between signs and houses. Each has its keyword role. Performing a keyword interchange between signs and houses has somehow shifted the sense of starting from the fourth house where it was traditionally assigned, to the first house where it does not fit. The key ideas of "beginning" and "ending" have traditionally been associated with the IC. It is time to set an errant course straight and to return the beginning and the ending of the quadrant cycles to where they rightfully belong. This can be rectified by clearer and more direct thinking on the nature of cycles, quadrants and the role of the houses in general. In our overall phases of life what we go through on a daily basis is shown by the activities through the astrological quadrants.

ANGULAR, SUCCEDENT AND CADENT

The houses in each quadrant lend other shades of meaning to life beside their quadrant and hemisphere significance. Each house is assigned either an angular, succedent, or cadent label. This label helps further refine the individual qualities of the house. Starting at the angle in each quadrant and moving counter-clockwise lie three houses, generically labeled angular, succedent, and cadent. As the first house in the quadrant the angular house urges you to heed what transpires while this quadrant's energies are activated. Angular houses initiate the quadrant's role. Angularity as a key concept involves personal growth, development, or growing toward the quadrant's central influences (see Figure 3). The angular house sets the motivation and style for how the quadrant is to function during the cycle.

The succedent house helps consolidate and form what the angular house initiates for this quadrant. The succedent house helps to build, shape and add stability or firmness to ongoing efforts. The succedent house helps solidify the actions initiated by the angular house. It helps shape how the idea or action can proceed and form. The succedent house emphasis is one of utilization, or finding the means or purpose for the action or process. Through the succedent house you consolidate the material or psychological resources needed. It helps bring purpose and equilibrium to what has been started. One purpose of the succedent house is to bring a definite aim and direction to fulfill the roles of the quadrant.

The cadent house emphasizes the evaluation, understanding, completion and testing of any processes started and solidified through the previous two quadrant houses. The cadent house ensures that what is being created has the shape and direction of what is needed for the following quadrant. If your scheme or development is still unprepared, then there is a cadent house mechanism which allows for the testing and alteration of plans. Sometimes this testing and alteration can be psychologically or materially painful. You have an obligation to self to become aware of the transpiring cycles. The cadent house ensures that you face and heed the messages generated by the passages of bodies through the quadrant.

If you do not read the signals generated by the cadent house, or if you do not modify your cyclical processes in accordance with what is being directed through the cadent house, then the cadent house allows for the disintegration of the ongoing process and its collapse, with the subsequent turmoil of withdrawal that accompanies this change. This may come as a psychic, mental, or physical shock as this happens. The depth of this shock may be in direct relationship to your awareness of what is happening. Your awareness of the relative merit or non-merit of your current cyclical activities and how these affect self and others is confronted through the cadent house.

Overall the cadent house function is to harmonize your efforts with what is needed to fulfill the quadrant's directions. If you are following your cycle's phases well, then the cycle can continue and the next quadrant entered without change. If there are modifications to be made, then the cadent house may initiate situations which show this need for modification. If the energies are heeded and appropriate changes made, then the changes can be absorbed. If not, there may be difficulties or trauma which may occur until the appropriate corrections are made. Appendix C lists specific keywords for the angular, succedent, and cadent qualities.

HEMISPHERES

In addition to the quadrants the personal sensitive points divide the chart into two distinct sets of hemispheres. The first hemisphere set is called left or eastern, and its pair is the right or western. The second set is called lower or northern, and its pair is the upper or southern hemisphere. Charts cast for localities north of the Earth's equator show the southern compass direction at the top of the chart and the northern compass direction at the bottom of the chart.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

For charts cast south of the Earth's equator (in Chile, South Africa, Australia, etc.) the compass directions are reversed. This is done so that a proper perspective on the Sun's travels can be kept, but this in no way changes the hemisphere meanings or symbolism. These are the symbolic directions where you would face the Sun at noon in these areas.

The hemispheres function along with the quadrants during the cycles of planetary passage. They do not alter the quadrant functions, but they do enhance them. The hemispheres super-impose themselves upon the activities of the quadrants and the quadrant development cycle. The hemispheric energies come before the quadrant energy push. The quadrants work with and through the hemispheres for their expression.

Regardless of where on Earth the chart is cast, there will be a lower and an upper hemisphere in the chart. The upper hemisphere symbolically represents daylight oriented interests, while the lower hemisphere depicts night time concerns. Despite which compass direction is applied to this directional notation, the hemisphere keywords given in Appendix C apply. The upper hemisphere symbolizes activities which are out in the open, before others. The bottom half of the chart symbolically represents activities which are performed in private or closed circumstances. The difference in the influences of these hemispheres is dramatic. One represents activities which are exposed to the scrutiny of others, while the other represents endeavors which take place internally and privately.

The left or eastern hemisphere holds the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, first, second, and third houses. It symbolizes activities which help you to develop yourself as a person. There is an emphasis on free will expression in this hemisphere. Matters about personal involvement become daily issues. The left hemisphere directs your focus on inner development and personal individuality. Personal aggressiveness becomes an important matter. There is a heightened sense of "me." Matters of self's desires, or matters concerning self, come into focus. The left hemisphere spurs you to develop powers of observation. Inner calls for rethinking your actions or to look carefully at the consequences of your actions and effect on others become highlighted. This is where your self-interests and self-development become accented. There is more personal latitude for decision and action here than when the western or right hemisphere is activated.

The right or western hemisphere brings an increasing complexity to life. Others place demands on your time and resources. Compared to the left hemisphere, when the right hemisphere is active, there is less personal control over daily events or circumstances. Events occur which are dictated more by what others want than what you desire. You find yourself reacting to situations set up by others. The sense of personal control and freedom the left hemisphere provided diminishes. In the right hemisphere others create situations which involve you in their destiny or reasons for being. You find you must learn to work with and through situations which others initiate. The right hemisphere raises topics where you face issues about cooperation. There is a need to control your responses to the experiences noted or encountered to gain more control over or responsibility for your actions. The right hemisphere brings increased socialization needs into your life.

The lower or northern hemisphere is concerned with the development of self as a person. In this hemisphere things of personal interest are emphasized. There is a strong push toward inner development and self-realization. It emphasizes the process of self-unfolding, or seeing your relationships with others as a means for developing self. There is also an emphasis on the continuing development of skills learned earlier in life. Common sense in dealing with the different phases of life is emphasized, as is the need for personal privacy. There is a push to live your life so that your own needs for protection and security are met first before the needs of others. The lower hemisphere may prompt you to withdraw from the mainstream of life's worldly flow and to be more inwardly focused in your interpersonal and living involvements. A call to look and live within self prevails here. It may also direct you to become more dependent upon a stronger personality.

The upper or southern hemisphere pushes you to develop inter-personal psychological qualities which you need for living among others, rather than in an inner world. Here the emphasis is not on retreat and anonymity, but on popularity and exposure. There is a desire towards externalizing self and learning how to become more public. When this hemisphere is emphasized your interpersonal goals need to be better defined. Plans for including others in your life become important. What you do is carefully scrutinized by others. There is little room for musing or mulling over theoretical possibilities. From this hemisphere comes a need for increasing self-confidence and building self-esteem through actions that others can see and evaluate. There is a push to gain recognition or prominence, or to place yourself in an open and visible position. The drive for achieving power and recognition is enhanced. The upper hemisphere urges you to express yourself more openly and directly.

VIEWPOINT

There is nothing good or bad about the various facets of astrology. There is no more or no less merit in one quadrant or hemisphere than another. Each shows a facet of human development. The fact that one side shows a Yin type of development and its opposite a Yang type of development does not make either one of them any better or any worse than the other. Each represents a part of existence. Each has its role to play in life. Remember this when making judgments about the placement of planets in the chart. The chart is neutral. It does not judge. It simply is. It simply provides for all facets of exposure and development within the human mechanism. Only those interpreting a chart place judgments on the meanings extracted using astrology.

Chapter 5
Choosing a House System

OVERVIEW

Houses are one of the seven distinct parts of astrology. The other parts are planets, signs, personal sensitive points, harmonics or aspects, fixed stars and long term cycles. Some Uranian or Cosmobiology practitioners feel that houses have not been sufficiently defined, and thus state they need not be used. Houses exist and whether or not anyone uses them is their choice. To imply, however, that houses are unimportant is wrong. Houses have a definite role in astrology. The information they give is necessary and serves to round out and shape the other astrological energies. It is folly to consider practicing Horary or Electional Astrology without considering the prominent and enriching role that houses lend to those disciplines.

Houses add structure and framework to the energies which come from the planets and signs. Houses provide a basis to anchor the energies available through the cosmos. The chart's houses depict areas of space which define various categories of life and how these may be displayed. Houses set a practical basis for considering the many different material things that enter and are a part of life. Houses allow us to see such diverse things as land, books, foreign interests, commercial banks, children, dietary habits, brothers and sisters, taxes, etc. There are more house keywords than sign, planet, personal sensitive point, or harmonic keywords combined. Houses help place or locate the different things of life which are so important to us. We all have the things of existence in our lives. Houses serve as the delineating vehicles for showing where these things belong in the chart. Houses receive and mold the other cosmic energies giving them meaning within the things of our personal world.

The purpose of any house system is to divide the sky into sectors or wedges of space. House systems were invented to mirror the concepts of day and night divisions into a chart. Since daylight and nighttime differ by month, season, and location on Earth, then projected houses can be of different sizes depending on the chart's originating criteria. It is this mirroring of the number of daylight and the number of nighttime hours which houses symbolically represent. Since the length of day or night is so locally oriented to a place on Earth, the question of how to erect a chart on the Moon, Mars, a space station, in deep space, etc., (where there are only artificial horizons and artificial day and night hours) should be addressed. But, how to include house and personal point systems for events which occur off the Earth (like on an orbiting space station, another planet, etc.) is deliberately left unanswered for now. There are some good answers, of course, but they lie beyond the confines of this book.

Houses allow us to include sectors of space in a chart. These are divided into daylight and night divisions by the personal sensitive points. In ancient times the length of an hour was determined by the amount of time between sunrise and sunset at a particular location. Six (or twelve) daylight hours and six (or twelve) night time hours were allowed. The number and length of the minutes in each such "hour" varied by culture and according to time of year and place on Earth, however. These "hours" divided sectors of the sky into divisions of time. House systems continue this tradition of dividing the day and night portions of a chart into sectors of space.

The process and refinement of calculating houses has changed since antiquity. Many things caused this change. For one, the quality of keeping time has become more standardized (timekeeping systems began to substantially improve during the 17th and 18th centuries) and mathematics has advanced to allow us to calculate circular motions more directly. Concerning the perception of time in our daily lives, in the years before and around A.D. 400 most people were happy to know the season of the year. By the 900s people wanted to know which month of the year they were in. By the 1500s people wanted to know the week; by the 1700s the day, by 1850s the minute, etc. Today we measure time in billionths of a fraction of a second and better. We have moved in a millennia and a half or so from gross time comprehension to super accurate time recognition. In this process events have speeded up and inner psychological space has become more crowded.

Because houses lend such importance to astrology it is important to understand something about how to choose a house system to fit your particular needs. Not all house systems fit all needs. Any house system may be appropriate for one task but not another. House systems can be selected by how they provide their particular services. Houses represent space in a chart. There are many different ways to present the concept of space — and there are many different ideas on house division. Let us begin to explore the concepts behind house division.

HOUSE DIVISION

The space around an event described in a chart is divided into four quadrants, as described in the last chapter. The ascendant and midheaven personal sensitive points define these quadrant boundaries. These quadrants do not necessarily contain the same amount of space however. Due to the angle of the Sun at the particular place on Earth being charted there may be more space for the Sun to move between sunrise and noon on one day of the year, or there may be more space for the Sun to move between noon and sunset at another time of the year, etc. The tilt of the Earth against the Sun also influences this spatial division. It is the unevenness of daylight or night space which gives houses their unequally sized shapes. It is this unevenness of space between the quadrant divisions which various house systems seek to emulate. Even when the houses and space appear to be balanced, this is an exception rather than the rule.

There are three categories of house division: direct, projection, and intersection. Direct house systems ignore any attempt to emulate unevenness in space division, while projection and intersection systems create mathematically complicated ways of trying to represent the unevenness of space within the divisions of our days (sunrise to noon, sunset to midnight, etc.). Direct house systems do not tie their house cusps to the astrological quadrants as completely as the projection and intersection systems do. Some projection house systems are mathematically simplified versions of other projection house systems. Before computers could be used to do house calculations any mathematically simplified methods had some merit. Today, with computers available to instantly calculate any house system desired, the simplified house systems merely add confusion and bulk.

Within each of these categories, different houses systems like Placidian, Regiomontanus, Campanus, Koch, and Equal House, are placed. There are at least twenty-four house division systems defined in astrological literature. Some are identical except in name. A few of these are popularly used, but most are quite obscure. Here is a breakdown of their names. Definitions of the house systems can be found in Appendices A and B.

The direct house systems are named:

Natural Hours	Equal	MC	Moon
Natural Graduation	Earth
Porphyry	Solar	Sun

The projection house systems are named:

Alcibitius Declination	Alcibitius Semi-Arc	Arcturan
Campanus	Classical	Horizontal
Meridian	Morinus	Octopos
Placidian	Radiant	Regiomontanus
Topocentric	Zariel

The intersection house system is named:

Koch

The chart embraces within it the ecliptic, the equatorial, and the horizon astronomical planes. The outer circular edge of a chart is the ecliptic, and it is onto the ecliptic that astrologers wish to project these other planes of information. Each plane is further divided into meaningful parts by circles which help them define up and down, east and west, etc. The names of some of these circles are prime vertical, meridian, horizon, celestial equator, etc. When drawing these circles in an astronomical diagram there will be places where they meet called poles. These poles are similar in function to the Earth's north or south poles. From these axes other circles can be drawn to help project cuts of space onto the astronomical planes. Some names of these projection circles are house, longitude, etc. See Appendices A and B for further information on this subject. See also Figure 1.

Direct house systems cut the ecliptic circle directly without the use of an intervening circle to project a house cusp onto the ecliptic. Projection and intersection house systems use an intervening circle to project or intersect their cuts. Direct house systems produce rather evenly spaced houses. Direct house systems like Porphyry, Natural Graduation, and Natural Hours try to imitate the effect of projection systems without complicated mathematics. Direct house systems provide divisions of space but not any proportionally sized sectors of space. Projecting space onto a place on the Earth's surface can be a complicated matter. To do this you need to project a circle at an odd angle on top of another circle. The particular odd angle chosen depends on the inclination of the Earth to the Sun, the time of day, day of the year, and location on Earth. Such projection distorts the roundness of either one circle or the other when these circles are then drawn on a flat piece of paper. Projection techniques use the mathematics of spherical trigonometry.

Direct house systems ignore any such projection and its possible distorting effects in favor of a more simplified mathematical approach. Direct house systems require little complicated mathematics. They can often be found without a calculator or pencil and paper. This is one part of their appeal. Another part of their appeal lies in using them in locations where the Sun never sets or rises. Without a sunrise and a sunset to divide the day, the quadrant system disappears and the mathematics for certain projection systems may fail. Direct house systems avoid this failure.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Projection house systems try to include the distortion effects introduced by the sun's daily quadrant markers, but by doing so calculation of their house cusps becomes more complicated. Projection systems make sense where these quadrant divisions are well defined. Such definition occurs in the middle latitudes of Earth, where the bulk of humanity lives. Projection house systems cut another circle (like the celestial equator, prime vertical, etc.,) into equal parts, and then project these divisions onto the ecliptic through another circle (like house circles, longitude circles, etc.). This projection can produce houses which are sometimes quite big or quite small. Any projection of circles in space onto the surface of the Earth will produce some distortion in the roundness of the circle being projected. For circles like the ecliptic the amount of distortion shown depends on time of day, place on Earth, etc., for which they are drawn. It is unusual to find equally spaced houses when using a projection house system. However any projection system more closely mirrors the amount of space included in a section of the sky than direct house systems do. The intersection system uses a set of lines in space which intersect the ecliptic for their cut. The Koch system is neither strictly a projection system nor a direct system. It merits its own category.

One advantage of using direct house systems is that they are easy to calculate. They often require little or no mathematical manipulation of circles or planes in space. Projection systems, however, require the use of spherical trigonometry for cusp calculation. Projection and intersection systems, in their defense, do mirror more precisely the movement of the ecliptic around the Earth. They are more difficult to calculate but provide a clearer representation of cosmic motion around a given location on Earth.

More western astrologers use the Placidian House system than any other house system. The Placidian House system is a powerful house system for doing natal astrological work. For other uses of astrology other house systems may be more appropriate. This chapter addresses some reasons for choosing one house system over another for a particular practice or look at a set of circumstances. To do this the theoretical construct of the different great circles of astronomy and the implications they carry should be addressed. Once you understand houses, you may come to appreciate why some house systems are better than others for your circumstances.

Astrology is an elastic practice. Techniques which one person finds useful another may not. There is enough overlap of cosmic information so that you can choose your own comfortable techniques. There are different ideas about how to practice astrology. Some astrological techniques are more thorough than others.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Some are simpler. You can choose any level of astrological sophistication you desire. However, some astrological methods return more information more accurately. The same is not true for house systems, however. Choosing a house system with more complicated mathematics does not necessarily provide more or better information than one which uses simpler mathematics.

Any house system you select should always::

1. Provide cusps for the accurate timing of events, and,

2. Divide space to properly place bodies into their correct spatial divisions.

If the house system you are using for a particular purpose does not do this, then it is not fulfilling its primary objectives. It matters little that the house system is used by others, is a popular system, is an unpopular system or fails in certain areas of the world. If it gives correct results use it. If it does not give correct results, then try another system for dividing space. There certainly are a wide range of house options available to you, and there should be a system of dividing space that can satisfy your needs given that the basic chart data is correct.

If the chart does not accurately represent the person or event (it is usually the chart time which is off by a few minutes or hours) then the time of the chart needs to be rectified. Rectification is a process which adjusts the time of a birth to events in a life. The rules of rectification lie beyond this discussion.

The ecliptic, horizon, celestial equator, meridian, prime vertical, and polar axis circles are all used to create the various house systems. Here are some advantages and disadvantages of the three systems of house division:

THREE SYSTEMS OF HOUSE DIVISION

PROJECTION

ADVANTAGES	DISADVANTAGES
Cuts true "wedges" of space to represent houses	Can astronomically fail in certain areas of the world
Ties the great circle frame-work into the chart	Difficult to mathematically compute cusps
Contains the most popularly used house systems	Difficult to find astronomical reasoning for some of the house systems described
Presents usable cuspal arrangements

DIRECT

Seldom fails astronomically	Does not tie the other great circles into the chart
Was used by ancient astrologers	Does not always cut true "wedges" of space for houses
Is very easy to compute mathematically

INTERSECTION

The arguments for or against using the Koch house system are similar to the ideas presented in the projection section above

Some astrologers believe that the Koch system creates the best house system. Other astrologers feel the Koch cusps are less helpful for natal or psychological usage than other systems. There is a "cult" of Koch house system users who claim that the method was resurrected from ancient times. This claim for ancient use is not clearly substantiated. The Koch house system is very difficult to either clearly explain or to reproduce in an astronomical diagram. The Koch system can be very good for circumstances involving the direct interaction of a person with events around them.

SOME ESOTERIC IMPLICATIONS OF THE GREAT CIRCLES

The pros and cons of the different systems of house division do not answer the often asked question of which house system to choose for a given astrological application. To make this choice intelligently take a deeper look at the different house system theories and study the esoteric implications of the great circles they use. This is best done by first understanding the astronomical, and from that the derived esoteric role, for each circle. Examining the six basic house division circles used is a good starting point toward this understanding. These circles are called the ecliptic, celestial equator, horizon, prime vertical, meridian, and polar axis circle.

The Ecliptic

The ecliptic is the most astrologically important of the astronomical circles. The ecliptic directly places the planetary and sign energies into the chart. The motion of the Earth and Sun in space define the ecliptic. The Sun psychologically represents both the ideas of center (or central) and ego or self. Thus, these terms can be associated with the esoteric idea of what the ecliptic represents. Due to the symbology of the Earth's yearly revolution around the Sun the idea of completeness can be added to the ecliptic's esoteric keywords. The ecliptic is the first of the closed circles. A completed circle has no beginning or end. It simply is. A circle's existence is defined by the fact that it is, and not by a definite beginning or end point.

The cardinal point of Aries is the chosen starting point for the ecliptic because it can be defined and measured accurately. The Aries Point helps to locate the other cardinal points: Cancer, Libra, and Capricorn. The signs of the zodiac are measured along the ecliptic circle. Actual planetary, sensitive point and stellar positions can also be moved to the ecliptic regardless of whether or not the body is located on the ecliptic. All house cusps in all systems of house measurement are measured to the ecliptic. All harmonics are measured along the ecliptic. If nothing else the ecliptic represents wholeness and stability. It is the origin for all of what is produced with astrology. The ecliptic often becomes the sole reference point for all heavenly information represented in a chart.

Astrology relies on the ecliptic for the definition of all human expressions and experiences. The ecliptic shows what you can learn and encounter in life. It is the only one of the great circles which is not dependent upon any of the other circles. It is the most important of the great circles. The ecliptic plane is defined by the Sun, the Earth, and the direction of the Earth's motion. Incorporating the qualities of these bodies and movement the ecliptic represents the most important universal esoteric features.

The ecliptic brings the other planetary positions into the Earth's sphere of existence. Without the ecliptic's role other planetary energies could not be brought into the perspective of their relationship with either the Earth or Sun. The ecliptic serves as a foundation for including other bodies. Because this plane of reference exists the energies of the other bodies is symbolically brought into our Earthly existence. Only the Moon does not require the ecliptic to transmit its planetary energy. The Moon uses the plane defined by its interaction with the Earth (called the Moon's nodal plane — shown by the Moon's nodal axis) as its vehicle of energy expression. For the chart to remain consistent, however, the Moon is placed using its ecliptic reference. Thus, the ecliptic carries and transmits all symbolic and astrological energies.

The ecliptic also defines the placement of the signs of the zodiac. Without something like the ecliptic the signs could not be represented in a chart. The zodiacal signs add color and flavor to the individual planetary energies. The signs also feed energy into the ecliptic. The ecliptic allows us to place a cosmic energy distribution around our location in a chart. The ecliptic both originates and facilitates. The ecliptic's dual role elevates it in importance above the other astronomical circles. The ecliptic is the most important astrological circle.

The Celestial Equator

The celestial equator provides a measure for the orientation of the Earth in space to the ecliptic. The celestial equator is the extension of the Earth's equator infinitely into space. It is this orientation that allows us on Earth to tie into the celestial energies that are available to us through the ecliptic. The tilt of the celestial equator vis-à-vis the ecliptic defines the important angle of obliquity. It is the value of this angle of obliquity which has much to do with the notion of how much celestial energy is received by the two hemispheres of the Earth in their summers and winters. The greater the angle of tilt (or obliquity) the greater the disparity in the amount of celestial energy received between summer and winter. As the angle of obliquity decreases the temperature tends to remain more constant all over the Earth, and the light variation among the seasons begins to diminish.

It is through the rotation of the celestial equator that we measure our days. As the Earth turns on its axis, once each day it returns to an orientation with the same point in the sky. This sky point measures our daily celestial movement. The celestial equator delimits our individual daily progress towards the goal of solar integration, or the involvement of self with life. The ecliptic measures our yearly progress in this direction. Since the day is the most primary of the different biological cycles the celestial equator represents the concept of daily reinforcement. It is this reinforcement of the daily cycle which serves to remind all living things where their source and origins are replenished. This cycle subconsciously reminds us that it is to the cosmos we must eventually return. It is not possible to see or measure progress without understanding the vehicle that measures our progress. The celestial equator serves as this universal reference. Hence, any idea or concept in our lives which employs the concept of either daily or repetition should be associated with the celestial equator.

It is through the celestial equator that we are able to tie the Earth to the Sun, and hence the ecliptic. The celestial equator serves as our local or daily esoteric exposure mechanism to the solar and planetary energies. The celestial equator takes the activities that we go through daily on Earth and apportions them to the ecliptic according to a seasonal scheme. The celestial equator serves as our delimiter for measuring this daily and seasonal progress or lack of same. The celestial equator is a daily reminder of how any point on Earth returns to the same solar or sidereal Sun angle after one rotation. The celestial equator ties the global view of our life to the cosmos. It is Earth's daily rotational effort which gives us the 24-hour exposure we receive to the different energies of the cosmos.

On any part of the Earth we are only exposed to one-half of the cosmic energies at any one moment. Since the Earth rotates, this rotational effect eventually exposes us to all of the cosmic energies within any 24-hour period. The celestial equator serves as our esoteric filter for insuring that we get an even distribution of these energies over any one 24-hour period. The celestial equator serves to give us an exposure of a different nature during our diurnal cycle. The celestial equator is also our representation for the midpoint of one year's worth of solar declination. As such the celestial equator serves as our delimiter for the different seasonal changes which we have on Earth.

The celestial equator serves as our link between the Earth itself and the cosmic interactions of the signs and the planets. It is like a middleman or broker in business, insuring that the cosmic distribution system remains fair, and that none of us miss exposure to the full energy effects of each place or location in the universe. The celestial equator insures that the planets, signs, stars, etc., have a means for the even distribution of their cosmic energies to the people who live here on Earth.

The celestial equator performs two functions.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

- It measures our exposure to any deviations in the universal energy shifts caused by seasonal or cyclical changes in the declination cycles. As such it is the primary cosmic reminder of such seasonal or cyclical changes, and,

- It expresses the Earth's daily rotational cycle, which ensures that we get a daily exposure to all heavenly locations

The celestial equator functions as an intermediary between the outer parts of the solar system, the galactic system and beyond, and the Earth itself. It is the primary gateway through which the other cosmic energies we use enter or exit. As such it is the most important circle for intercepting those energies and ensuring they become a part of our lives.

The Polar Axis Circle

The Earth's polar axis circle divides the celestial equator into two even hemispheres. The polar axis circle passes through the celestial equator (which are 90 degrees or 1/4th of the way from the Aries or Libra Points) and the north and south poles of the celestial sphere (which are the projections of the Earth's poles into infinity). The highlight of the polar axis circle is these two polar points, one in the north and one in the south. Physically, it is through these two points that the majority of the cosmic particles come pouring into the Earth. These points are very close to the magnetic poles of the Earth which form the shield or guide through which the particles of the solar wind come into the surface of the Earth. The magnetic shield of the Earth forms close to the poles of the Earth and in the polar regions there is a type of magnetic "weakness" which allows the cosmic particles from the Sun and elsewhere to enter within the Earth's protective shield. The northern (or southern) lights or aurora borealis or australis demonstrate this.

The polar axis circle serves as the representation for both the intake and the exhaust of all type of solar or other cosmic particles which enter the Earth's region in space. The polar axis circle also serves as the representative of both the magnetic and ozone Earth shields. These shields contain a deliberate weakness. The psychological symbology of this weakness may correlate with the concept of aging, forecasting or etheric planes. The polar axis circle represents the basic point from which all measurements can be taken, because they serve as definite and definable points on the Earth. It has been reckoned that the architects of the Great Pyramid used the Earth's polar axis as the basis for their primary unit of measure, the cubit. Scientists have speculated that the basic unit of measurement used in the English world, the foot and the inch, derive from the distance from the Earth's north pole to its center along the Earth's axis — the foot being one-five-hundred millionth of the measurement of that distance. The metric system uses a similar fraction of the distance along the Earth's equator as its basis of measure.

Like the celestial equator, the polar axis circle reminds us of the Earth's diurnal or daily rotation and the exposure that gives us to the heavenly domains. The polar axis circle gives us a true north and south orientation and serves as one reference point for directions from Earth to space. It also gives a reference point for our local space directions. The Great Pyramid is aligned with the Earth's polar axis circle very accurately. Our road maps are aligned to the polar axis circle very accurately. The basis for land measurement on the Earth's surface accurately uses the polar axis circle.

Coupled with the celestial equator the polar axis circle defines one of the three planes used to orient the Earth and the planets in space. The polar axis circle is the other part of the celestial equator which serves to give the celestial system of coordinates form and definition within its projective plane of influence. The two great circles work together, one with the other, to define how the Earth is oriented into space. The celestial equator orients the Earth to the Sun, and the Earth's polar axis represents where we anchor our terrestrial measurements. It is the origin and the ending of our basic system of Earth measurement and reference. It may also be symbolic of whatever cosmic or etheric interference we allow into our lives.

The Horizon

The horizon is a very personal circle and it is esoterically associated with the "here and now" of your environment. The horizon separates your world into an up and a down, that which is in the sky and that which is below the Earth. It is also tied into a particular place on Earth at a particular time. Its perspective is easily moved and altered. The horizon that one person has is not the same horizon for another person. Whereas the celestial equator, the polar axis circle, and the ecliptic each tie the Earth and cosmos together, the horizon, meridian, and the prime vertical tie your immediate circumstances on Earth to the cosmos. The horizon orients where a person is on Earth to events in space. It is a most personal astrological great circle. It directly relates what you see, or your immediate perspective, to the heavens.

The horizon is what you see when you look where the Earth and sky meet in the distance. The horizon requires and gives perspective. Astronomically four different horizons are used, but the visible horizon can easily substitute in your mind for the celestial horizon that is actually used in house mathematics. As you move from location to location your perspective shifts and you alter your horizon. Imagine several people sitting in the same room. Each of them has his or her own horizon perspective. The horizon from one person's orientation is not exactly the same horizon or orientation that another person has, even if they are standing next to each other. The horizon is a very personal circle. It is the circle which psychologically ties our location and perspective to the planets and energies of the cosmos.

Esoterically the horizon symbolizes what you are doing in the here and now. It is your immediate and direct perspective on how you are relating to the events around you. It represents how and where you mentally interface to this immediate environment. It is through the horizon that you are able to gain a perspective on how to view your world. The horizon is locally oriented. The horizon gives its orientation because the Earth's gravity keeps your feet oriented towards the Earth's center. Since you walk with your feet on the ground you are given some perspective about our environment through your horizon. The horizon in turn separates your piece of Earth from the heavens.

Your horizon always exists at some particular angular relationship to the celestial equator. This is important to understand. This angular relationship is shown by terrestrial latitude. If you are standing at 40° North, then your horizon relationship to the celestial equator is different from the horizon relationship a person has at 35° North, or 20° South, or whatever. Each person's relationship on Earth to the celestial equator is also governed by their terrestrial longitude. Two people at the same terrestrial longitude may have different horizons, as each may be at a different latitude. The celestial equator in turn relates each individual horizon to the ecliptic, and the ecliptic in turn relates your horizon to the planets. Each piece has its own function and purpose — and each works and interacts with the others.

A chart for a place not on this Earth would have to create the horizon concept in order to include the personal sensitive points. There are many ways for doing this, some of them quite arbitrary. The concept of houses and personal sensitive points for a chart done off of the Earth is an issue which astrology may have to face in the near future.

The Prime Vertical and Meridian

The prime vertical and the meridian work along with the horizon in giving us a left and right definition to where we are and what we see in our Earthly environment. The prime vertical and the meridian are always ninety degrees from each other. They represent different perspectives in their lines of division. The prime vertical divides the celestial sphere perpendicular to the horizon, dividing the horizon into a northern and southern part. The meridian divides the celestial sphere and the horizon into eastern and western halves. The prime vertical and the meridian are used for synchronizing the Earth's rotation with the horizon. They serve as the two primary measuring circles for determining how the horizon is oriented to the celestial equator and polar axis circle at any moment.

The prime vertical and the meridian go through the zenith and the nadir points of the celestial sphere. The zenith and nadir are the highest and the lowest points of the heavens, as seen from an observer's viewpoint. The zenith is the heavenly point directly over your head, and the nadir is the heavenly point directly under your feet. The zenith and nadir change as an observer moves around on the surface of the Earth. For two observers standing in close proximity to each other, even within the same room, each has their own zenith and nadir points, each has their own horizon circle, and each has their own prime vertical and meridian. The prime vertical, the meridian, and the horizon only exist when there are circumstances which use them. Then the occasion or event itself defines its horizon, prime vertical, and meridian.

The prime vertical and the meridian bring consistency to the coordinate systems used for defining Earthly location. The prime vertical or the meridian helps you find a celestial correspondence which has personal meaning. Neither the prime vertical nor the meridian take the heavens or planets into consideration. They deal strictly with the person or the event occurring on the surface of the Earth. The prime vertical and meridian define the orientation of that event, as seen through the horizon system, to the heavens. Thus the prime vertical and the meridian work not through a heavenly hierarchy or scheme, but through a personal and local scheme. The prime vertical and the meridian serve to give the local space of any event Earthly consistency.

The prime vertical and the meridian work together to define a concept of time and time passage in the Earthly plane. They symbolically represent here and now to us. The prime vertical conveys a sense of "rising" and "setting." The meridian gives us consistency in time measurement. Thus the meridian represents consistency, while the prime vertical represents opportunity — yet each works together with the horizon in defining the event framework between our local orientation and what is occurring in the heavens. The prime vertical and the meridian drape like a tent over the horizon, and give the flatness of the horizon some depth and character. Like a tent these circles serve to define the framework of our awareness and perceptual systems, assuring that the events we go through incorporate the energies of the cosmos.

CONSIDERATIONS

Each astrological house system is some combination of the different great circles. If you understand the esoteric implications of the different great circles you are better prepared to determine which of these circles, or which combination of these circles, are the ones that you would want to use for your house system of choice. Astrology confronts you with choices, and the choice of which house system to use at any particular time can be confusing. If, however, you understand the nature of the event you want to astrologically portray and if you understand the esoteric implications of the great circles available to build a house system, then you can choose which house system would best fit your circumstances and needs. The rules when selecting a house system are to think, apply knowledge, and choose. Here are some examples of how to make your house system choices.

If you desire to incorporate the immediacy of events around you (going to a race track and timing when a race starts demands immediacy), then choose a house system which has the horizon and meridian prominent in its calculations, like the Koch, Campanus, Horizontal, or Arcturan systems. If you desire a house system with an esoteric or cosmic primary view, then choose a house system like the Equal, Porphyry, or Solar systems which primarily use an ecliptic point of view. If you desire a house system which incorporates a worldly view along with cosmic insight, then choose a house system which incorporates the celestial equator and the ecliptic interacting, like the Placidus, Regiomontanus, or Topocentric systems. If you desire a house system with a strong emphasis on timing, then choose a house system like the Meridian or Zariel.

Suppose you wish to do a general interpretation for a client and desire a general usage house system which would show that person's place in the world and their general relationship with the cosmos. With these criteria chosen the sense of "world" and "cosmos" are decided — yet a sense of the personal must be maintained, too. These criteria imply using a house system which has the celestial equator prominent as well as the ecliptic, and certainly the horizon or ascendant projected through this. The Placidian, Regiomontanus, and Topocentric house systems meet these demands. If these are your requirements then you should consider using either the Placidian, Regiomontanus, or Topocentric house systems for this astrological chart.

Another set of circumstances might require a chart reading for the start of a horse race at a particular racetrack. The criteria now would be more immediate and local — certainly the horizon, meridian, and prime vertical should be prominent in the house system used. With these criteria then, the Horizontal,

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Koch, Zariel, Campanus, Alcibitius, or Arcturan systems should be considered for usage.

The house system used should fit the circumstances. There is no easy answer to which house system to use at any particular time. The choice, as always, lies with the practitioner. It is through the understanding of what makes up the choices of the different house systems though that your intelligence shows through. There is no guarantee that what works for one set of circumstances may always work for another set of circumstances. Study and understand the circumstances of the life situation that is to be astrologically portrayed, and determine which of the great circles best fit these circumstances. Then choose that house system which best fits that combination of great circles. Appendix A goes into greater detail on how house systems are constructed and which circles they use prominently. Appendix B gives mathematical formulae for deriving these house systems.

Within this set of thinking ecliptic-based house systems show the general energy of the cosmos well, but do little to relate this flow of energy to the horizon. Celestial equator-based systems relate the general influences in the world to the cosmos better, but do little to take into account the influences of what is occurring in the here and now of our daily existence. The horizon-based systems cannot relate the general influences in the world as well as a celestial equator-based system can. The choices remain up to the astrological practitioner. Through knowledge of how houses are formulated, an astrologer can be better prepared to use their interpretive art.

BIG AND LITTLE HOUSES - EMPTY HOUSES - INTERCEPTED HOUSES

When the house system of choice is a projection or intersection system, then there may be certain times during the day when somewhat bigger or smaller houses may be projected. Depending on terrestrial latitude and time of the year, there may be times of the day when some houses will be extraordinarily large, and there may be times when some houses are very small. An average house size is thirty degrees. House size in projection systems depends on latitude, season, and time of day. Sometimes houses as smaller than 13 degrees occur and sometimes houses larger than 45 degrees, or almost one and one-half again as big as they should be, occur.

What do these big and little houses mean? Obviously house size has no relevance unless a house system is chosen which can generate different sized houses. Direct house systems do not create much house size diversity, but projection and intersection house systems do. The size of a house seems to have something to do with the importance of that house to the chart. A house smaller than about 24 degrees seems to diminish the priorities of that house. A house of 36 degrees or larger seems to assign a more important role. An extraordinary house size seems to convey meaning. When interpreting a chart, look at the house sizes (if you are using a projection house system), and you may begin to understand where some of the more important and personal astrological priorities may lie.

Houses that are empty — those which have no planetary occupants — are just as important, if not even more so, than those that have planets occupying them. Visualize the chart as emitting a stream of energy from its center. This stream of energy spouts forth equally in all directions through the twelve houses of the chart. It is available for use by the person or event depicted by the chart. The source of this energy is the cosmos itself. The flow of energy through the houses is either smooth or turbulent depending on the planets placed in the twelve house paths. Like the waters of a stream, which flows through the countryside, this energy flows through the chart. If the flow of a country stream encounters rocks, then the water shows a turbulent surface. If the flow of a stream is over a smooth bottom, however, then the surface of the water in the stream remains calm.

In life, activities which show action or turbulence tend to grab and occupy our attention. Similarly, the flow of energy from the source of the chart shows either turbulence or smoothness depending on the location of planets in the houses. If a house has planets in it the planets may act as rocks in a stream and create some turbulence. The flow of energy in that house is disturbed and may subconsciously gain our attention. If the house has no planets in it then the flow is smooth and undisturbed. We notice the turbulence of life more than we do those areas where activity is calmer. Disturbance draws attention. Similarly, those houses which have planets in them may occupy more of our attention than houses with no planets. All houses are a part of our existence, but it is those houses having planets which may consume most of our attention. That does not imply that empty houses go unused, but that we tend to live or spend time and/or personal energy concentrating where life's tumult grabs our attention. Empty houses have their role and may occupy our time too, but not as much as houses which show a greater planetary activity. Remember that transits and progressions of planets through a house will alter a house's occupancy rate.

One important use of the empty houses is projection (in a psychological sense). People are able to project planetary qualities across the chart into an empty house (or sign). For example, if one has their Sun in the fourth house, and the tenth house is an empty house, then their behavior at times may mirror that of a Sun in the tenth house person. This projective mechanism is not well studied, but it has been observed often enough to realize that it is a real and persistent phenomena. Not every person projects their cosmic energies. It is difficult to predict beforehand if someone may perform psychological projection. Be aware that it can happen and allow for it in chart interpretation practices. Boredom with life's situations seems to stimulate this projection process.

Houses may contain intercepted signs. Intercepted signs are signs of the zodiac which are completely contained within a house and do not occupy a house cusp. This primarily occurs when using a projection house system. For a sign to be intercepted the house has to be greater than 30 degrees in size, which means that it may already be somewhat increased in importance. When a sign is intercepted there is no cusp through which the sign's energies can exit. The energies of the sign are locked within that house. They lack an outlet or direction. Intercepted signs may provide unfocused energy. The person who has an intercepted sign may have difficulty using this energy in a consistent way. Without a channel to guide it the sign energy may tend to eddy and curl. The energy of the sign may come out in an unusual manner. If there is a planet (or planets) in the sign, then the planetary energies may also be difficult to focus within the person's life. The advantage to this is that the person is able to study this locked-in energy at their unconscious leisure and thus gain a better understanding of the potentials that this energy offers. The disadvantage of an intercepted sign is that it causes an additional restlessness, and this restlessness is often difficult to cope with psychologically. It is easy to correct this problem, if in fact this is a problem. Move! Change location from your birth place. Move to a location where the sign is no longer intercepted, and then the energy patterns can be released.

HEMISPHERIC EMPHASIS AND PLANETARY PATTERNS

The patterns the planets form in the whole chart have been described by Marc Edmund Jones, Dane Rudhyar, Charles Jayne, and others. The patterns formed by the planets within the different hemispheres and quadrants of the chart are important but incompletely researched. These patterns can show the primary emphasis and thrust of our lives through the categories which are represented. For instance, a large number of planets (four or more in a house is a stellium) in the developmental quadrant may show that a person should not spend much time in introspection, a stellium in the introspection quadrant may show that this person works best alone, etc. If there are groupings of planets in a chart under study, then these groupings may tend to go left or right, or up or down. Appendix C of this book lists keyword associations for the astrological quadrants and hemispheres.

THE CYCLES OF LIFE

One of the more important reasons you should study astrology is to gain an understanding of the different life cycles you experience. Astrology includes learning about these cycles, their symbology and importance. Each planet has its own cycle of movement through the chart. Each has its own rhythm. One of the better studied cycles is the 29-year Saturn cycle which depicts responsibility and steadiness as it transits the chart quadrants; another is the twelve year Jupiter cycle. The two year Mars cycle is less well studied, as is the yearly Sun cycle, or the monthly Moon cycle. Be aware that the chart is a symbolic diagram and shows you which category of life these cycles are activating. As, say, Uranus transits the inception quadrant you may be urged to look quite differently on life than when Uranus is transiting the adaptation quadrant.

Each cycle of life operates with an up or down pattern. This movement is neither good nor bad, but shows the interplay of the yin and yang sides of astrology. This up and down can be thought of like a sine wave. The sine wave is a periodic function which goes through its cycles in an up and a down fashion, showing completeness only when it has gone through its total cycle. There is an emphasis on rhythm and completion. In a similar manner the cycles of life that the planets put us through may take us through the up and down cycles of life. This is neither good nor bad, but is simply a manifestation of the different parts of our existence. How would we be able to understand and appreciate the highs of life if we were not able to compare them with the lows? It is this interplay of the ups and the downs, the highs and the lows, the yin and the yang, which gives us the contrasting energies which power astrology and our lives. People have the freedom to pull either yin or yang energy from the planets whenever they choose to do so, and regardless of where they are in their planetary cycles.

Astrology is the study of cyclical energy flows in their every facet. The path and duration of our energy flow is presented symbolically through the chart. Like dreams (which contain personal symbols), it is through the study of astrological cycles that we can place our experiences into perspective. This book introduces you to some of the underlying but not too often explained facets of astrology. Through study of this work you should

- Realize that houses are important and have an astrological role
- Learn more about house keywords and meanings
- Determine which house system to use and when
- Understand the hemispheres and quadrants better
- Gain a better overall understanding of astrology in general

This book is written to help you understand houses. This book is intended to be both a reference work and a working textbook. Read parts of this book for information, and use parts of this book as a reference.

Studies consistently show that planets placed near or about the different personal sensitive points in a chart are powerfully placed. Chart services can draw the rising and setting lines for your planets on a local or world map. These maps can quickly pinpoint where planets are conjunct the angles (i.e., the personal sensitive points) of a chart, and thus where you can find the individual planetary power point locations.

Much research and work remains to be done with the personal sensitive points, as well as with the quadrants, hemispheres, and houses. This book only begins to emphasize the importance which lies here. This book primarily serves as a bridge between keywords and astrological practice. Good word-smithing to you.

Houses of the FOURTH Quadrant

Poetry for the Houses of this Quadrant

First House

First off be with me when Myself to you does send Loud calls for all to see
The more substantial me.

Second House

Beyond comfort, value or money
Inner worth is prized by many Through Heaven's gate try getting inside
Having neglected your spiritual side.

Third House

Twists of the cosmic eternals
New ways of finding external
Wisdom not learned from schools
But streetwise tricks and rules.

An Overview of the First House

An Angular House of the Fourth Quadrant
Placed in the Left and Lower Hemispheres

The First House focuses on developing personality, individuality, and character. It represents you! The First House helps you develop the self which you allow others to see, that part of you which faces the world, and the approach you take when confronting life's challenges. Through the First House you meet that part of yourself concerned with forming, presenting, and maintaining your identity. The First House describes how you may establish and present the most visible parts of you. If you have no planets in the First House does this mean you have no personality? No planets here mean that evolving a personality is not as important as developing another house's qualities. The First House helps mold your attitudes toward self, personality, or your needs for recognition. A person with an empty First House has just as many personal needs for self identification as a person with Neptune in the First House, who has just as many selfhood needs as a person with many planets in the First House, etc. Individual differences in First House emphasis show the inner importance placed on developing and maintaining day to day individuality.

Planets in a house add extra importance to that house by just being there. No planets in a house mean that no extra accent of that house's themes are sought. However, the sign on the house cusp, the planetary ruler(s) of that sign, aspects to the planetary ruler(s), and the natural planetary ruler(s) of the house still influence the development of that house's qualities. A person with only the planet Neptune in the First House may find that they have an unsure image of who they are as a person, or how they should demand personal recognition from others. A person with many planets in the First House may find that issues of defining who self is, how self is named or addressed, and the personal priorities which they ask of others, may dominate much of life's procedures.

The First House represents your identity, how you maintain your identity, how you project this identity, and how you shape and define self's identity. The First House symbolizes the enjoyment you get from taking personal risks while moving through life. These risks may involve an emphasis on personal appearance or grooming, motorcycle riding, assaults on another's territory or person, the use of daring colors while painting, etc. The form of expression is not as important as the emphasis of the personal statement which the activity chosen makes about your needs. Your definition, shape, and personal emphasis on the development of your persona starts with the First House.

The First House describes your approach to the various personal style nuances which you use to define self. Here your find your mannerisms astrologically depicted. How differently someone may approach life if they have Venus as a single planet in the First House, as opposed to a person who has their Mars conjunct Saturn in the First House. The person with Venus in the First House may find that life can be quite pleasant and relaxed while the person with the Mars conjunct Saturn in the First House may find that little is gained from life without constant struggle and battle against all. One person will define self by taking a relaxed approach to living while the other will view self as one who must constantly fight to carve their niche in life.

The First House focuses on your needs for self-discovery or self-identification. The risks taken with life, the emphasis placed on how self can be projected before others, or the personal noise you are willing to make about how others should notice your selfhood is shown here. There are many ways to project self into life. The work of projecting and defining the person who resides in your body is shown through the First House. Identifying what self is and how to work with this self is also a part of the First House.

The projection of self is only one part of First House functions. Another important part is the freedom allowed for expressions of individuality. It is through the First House that you begin to learn how to vary the expressions of what other people see as you. It is through the First House that you begin to experiment with the various shades of expression which you allow for yourself and then test how these begin to mold and define self to others. Such testing, definition, and redefinition may occupy an entire lifetime.

The development, nurturing, or abandoning of habits, nuances, styles, appearance, etc., are reflected by the First House. The First House represents the style of personality you define and develop for facing others and the world. We all come with various ideas on how to face life, and it is through the First House that we shape and mold these innate abilities into the persona we wish to present. The First House helps us define our unique characterizations. Developing and honing our unique individual identity is a constant lifelong pursuit.

First House keywords are filled with words of a Martian nature. Words like guns, armor, male things, action, arousal, exploits, insertion, noise, might, your name and its variations, etc. fill the keyword list for the First House. Barren areas, empty places, wastelands, and especially the forefront of anything dominate the First House word lists. Because of its connections with both Mars and Aries, the First House represents initial impressions both given and received. Therefore, words of this nature rightly belong to the First House, like the front bumper of a car, the entryway of a home, the start of individual events, the home team, etc. Your overall health is also shown here.

All houses are important in their own way. None is better or worse than another. None is more or less important than another. However, by its very nature the First House demands attention from all that you do in life before the other houses should be considered. "Me first" really sums up the First House.

An Overview of the Second House

A Succedent House of the Fourth Quadra nt
Placed in the Left and Lower Hemispheres

Through the Second House you become concerned with the value of what you receive, seek, or earn in life. Value has many subtle shades of meaning, all expressed through the astrological nuances of the Second House. The benefit you get from the material things you receive or accumulate, the value of money earned, the way to keep and increase (or decrease) this money while it is in your possession, the value to you of money as a medium of exchange, the value placed on the personal role of finances, etc., are all Second House issues.

The Second House represents the value you place on your personal and psychological worth. It is difficult to accumulate things and be happy with possessions if you find no happiness with your inner or personal worth. The personal comforts you allow yourself from the finances and possessions you seek or acquire are Second House concerns. It is one thing to receive compensation for services and it is quite another to be satisfied with the place and lot in life which these allow. Shown here are both the value received for effort expended and the personal value placed on the services rendered or given to others.

The Second House invites you to examine the balance between your needs for materiality and your needs for spirituality. Materiality involves the ability to take ideas or values, make them workable for others, and receive compensation for efforts done. How you let attachment to material things affect your daily life and yet not impede your spiritual progress is a Second House concern. You must be able to balance your wants for material things with the inner happiness you get from having these things. The Second House serves to increase your awareness about having material possessions and the medium of exchange needed to get these possessions, i.e., money for effort expended. It also urges you to realize the enhanced personal worth you can receive for inner happiness gained from spiritual progress. Neither compensation nor material things are bad -- but giving up spiritual progress to obtain material things is short sighted.

The Second House serves to either increase or decrease spiritual involvement in the material world. Some persons are so rooted to spiritual thoughts and values that they are oblivious to the simple acts of living together within society. The Second House shows these persons how to bring spiritual ideas into a more harmonious adjustment with daily needs. Others are so rooted in the material world that they are unable to recognize that they too are spiritual beings and must eventually return to their spiritual roots. The Second House invites them to achieve a balance between the extremes of spirituality and materiality. Unbalancing these extremes may bring circumstances which call for them to readjust their lifestyle.

The Second House helps increase your awareness about the importance of financial clout. But, financial influence in the material world does not buy spiritual leverage in an afterlife. Therefore, the Second House encourages you to take a look at your material growth and to place your ideas in balance with your feelings about your need for spiritual growth. You can gauge your progress in each category: the self-esteem you build through the works you produce and efforts you undertake to become a balanced person. If you can measure some growth in your personal happiness while maintaining material growth, then you might have met an important Second House challenge.

Basic internal feelings about the ownership, borrowing, and lending of personal possessions are also shown here. Ideas about the ownership or possession of material things, attitudes about property which others have, your identity through the goods or things which you crave or own, and how you inwardly feel about the accumulation and use of these things are all matters of the Second House. The Second House helps you build on your sense of material discretion. The care which you give your possessions, the care which you show other people's possessions, and the care which others show your possessions are shown through Second House activity.

The Second House also represents your ability to relax and take comfort in the material world. Relaxation is an important concept in life. Rushing from one event to another is the realm of the First House. The Second House asks that you take stock of what you want, where you are going, and what you will do to relax and enjoy yourself after your arrival. The Second House represents the inner value you place on material things, but it also concerns itself with your desires to use your material means to increase your comfort. It is one thing to acquire financial or material possessions, but it is quite another to feel comfortable with them. Without some balance between materiality and spirituality you may not be able to fully enjoy the richness of this house.

The Second House reflects benefits received for services offered. Some people receive money or status through birthright, some through hard work, but all try to earn it somehow. The Second House represents your attitudes toward acquiring and using material resources. It represents your recognition of materiality, and the balance you seek to satisfy the pull between materiality and spirituality. The Second House asks that you explore the benefits found from gaining financial insight while guarding your innate spirituality.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Traditionally the Second House rules money and finances. The Second House invites you to closely and personally examine the richness of self-developed appreciation, the benefits of taking a rest during the hectic pace of life, and the enjoyment of the finer things in life such as good music, a comfortable easy chair, or an expensive home.

An Overview of the Third House

A Cadent House of the Fourth Quadrant
Placed in the Left and Lower Hemispheres

The Third House shows your inner cleverness at examining and using the various angles which life presents. These angles can offer the personal latitude, space, or adjustments which you may come to feel are your right. Angles involve not only points of view but also focus and perspective. Playing the angles is a common term which denotes living life close to the edge, or getting more from your lot than others. A basic concept behind the Third House is discovering that there are few limits to what you should accept in life.

The Third House traditionally represents short journeys, transportation, brothers and sisters, and early education. But, short journeys to where? Brothers and sisters in what context? Early education is only the start of continuing education -- or the learning that life has many different faces. Should we ever stop learning about that? Should we ever stop investigating the different possibilities or angles of life which we can twist or turn to our advantage? Not if we pay attention to the way we wish to use our Third House energies.

Life can be difficult. Consider the lot of a brooding bird, nesting from four to nine eggs. When the first hatchling appears and demands food, the parents feed and nurture the youngster's demands. The youngster learns and grows from its insistence. As its siblings hatch over the coming hours or days the first born enjoys the advantage of the early special care and feeding. Its strength increases as it learns to communicate its demands.. Should food become short or the parents fail in their caring, then the oldest and strongest have the best chance to survive the crisis. Cruel as this may seem it is raw nature in action. Simple and basic as this story is, it illustrates the Third House in action. When considering survival who should be placed first: me or siblings or visitors?

Humankind generally takes a kinder view of life than starving creatures. Through our educational systems in America we are taught to treat all beings equally. However, issues between brothers and sisters will still arise. It is from our siblings, if any, that we receive our first social lessons, our first lessons about sharing, our first lessons about the place of "me." The process of early education begins, well, early. Often the Third House is confused with formal education, but many people (or animals) have no such luxury. The Third House requests that we learn, try, repeat, relearn, and then travel to learn again. Those born without siblings learn from others who represent the concept of sibling to them. The Third House influence doesn't stop on technicalities.

Astrologers have expended much energy trying to explain the differences between Third House "short" journeys and Ninth House "long" journeys. Let the Third House represent what we each learn from our daily encounters with life, and let the Ninth House represent the formal schooling or education for which we obtain official recognition. In America, such formal recognition is not generally given until the first graduation exercise occurs at the end of high school. Other countries have similar systems of reward, but again, usually not until more basic skills have been acquired. In America today basic "reading, writing and 'rithmatic" represent expected skills, and it is these expected skills, whatever form they may take for the culture or circumstance involved, that are ruled by the Third House.

The Third House represents communication in all forms. Think about the analogy of the nested hatchlings. Not the loudest, but the one which communicated most effectively receives the first food. In modern society effective communication has different shades of meaning. Hatchlings don't care about writing term papers or doing homework for learning lessons, but school children do. A well placed truth can receive more attention than thousands of babbled words. The needs and communications as expressed by the Third House can and do vary from situation to situation. The Third House urges adaptability within all present situations. But, current situations are meant to change. Devious twists and turns can appear through the Third House.

There is a mental side to the Third House due to its association with the zodiacal sign of Gemini and the yang side of Mercury, its ruling planet. It takes much mental adaptability to examine the various twists of fate which can be created for your needs. Again, referring to the nested hatchlings, you can realize that it is not just the volume of noise which gets the first food, but the cleverness with which the noise gains the provider's attention. Similarly, the Third House tells us that it is not what you write or speak but the appropriateness of those communications which will make you remembered, cherished, or fed.

Beyond journeys, transportation, siblings, or education, the Third House represents your capacities for adapting. It also represents your capacity for duplicating. Adaptation involves the use of mental powers to make the most of current situations. It is through your mental adaptability that you are able to meet and face all which life demands. Duplicating is the "angle" which allows you to recognize that no work presented needs to be completely original.

The Third House also calls for a use of cleverness, and this ties to similar concepts like thinking, reasoning, etc. which are also Third House related. Other keywords indicate the use of wit, repartee, things having to do with the distribution of goods (like transportation, vehicles, etc.), distribution systems (anything from down spouts to trucking routes), alibis (which are another form of angle), and weather. The word lists are quite long and varied -- but isn't variety just one of the many concepts the Third House portrays?

Houses of the FIRST Quadrant

Fourth House

Home and family, hold them close,
Moods abound, most morose,
Inside of you, most protected
Lie inner places, not all accepted.

Fifth House

Seek love and romance, play games robust,
Find inner happiness, not sex untrussed,
Develop your self, inner satisfaction is good,
But gamble not with parenthood.

Sixth House

Service is expected, habitual working,
A willing attitude, without any smirking,
Keep the body clean, small pets unconfined,
Take care of your health, discipline your mind.

An Overview of the Fourth House

An Angular House of the First Quadrant
Placed in the Right and Lower Hemispheres

The Fourth House reflects whatever home, family, or tradition means for you. This especially includes early and later life experiences with these ideas. The Fourth House is psychologically powerful because it shows the depth and core of emotional attitudes about any matters you use to build basic personality foundations. The Fourth House also depicts the beginning and ending of all matters, and for that reason the start and end of many important life's cycles begin here. The Fourth House shows the style in which you choose to roost or live. It represents your basic inner nature, personal matters, fixed possessions such as houses or land, concerns about privacy, attitudes toward family, and anything involving your instinctive emotional motivations.

The Fourth House represents your basic emotional roots and origins. These are generally defined by the nurturing parent or caretaker, usually the mother. The Fourth House represents the care and devotion this mother gives, how this care and devotion is received, and the strings attached to these qualities. Your initial adjustment to life in this world is shown by the Fourth House. This adjustment involves any combination of heredity traits, family support, loving care, ethnic traditions, etc., which you receive or are denied. The Fourth House calls for the eventual fusion of these subjective building blocks to create the self.

The Fourth House involves learning self-sufficiency, or the way you create an individual personality outside of direct family influence. Your early encounters with a mothering figure eventually begin a process of separation from family to become an individual who can then start his or her own family. Developing self-sufficiency requires that you gain some perspective on what you must do to become self-sufficient. Becoming self-sufficient is a necessary task of living. It is just the beginning of a long journey. Realizing that you must eventually break away from your family and define your own life is a constant Fourth House process. Completing this process by early middle life prepares you for meeting later life obligations. Failure to complete it may lock you into difficult emotional patterns of dependency.

The Fourth House mirrors the psychological makeup of your life, especially concepts about your personal space and how you guard your privacy or personal matters. It is through the Fourth House that you first begin to integrate your inner personality and the self you wish to build. Taking distinct pieces and building a self is shown through the Fourth House. The Fourth House shows what inner resources the material world allows, and how these can be allowed to mold and form the emotional resources of your emerging self. The Fourth House shows how you can achieve greater inner personal strength, develop more as a person, and increase your overall emotional growth.

The Fourth House represents a basic and fundamental side of your nature. It is that part of your nature which you work through to initiate life processes and other important life experiences. See the discussion on the astrological quadrants in Chapter 4 for further elaboration on this theme. The Fourth House represents how your quest for completion or recognition in life begins. Central to the Fourth House are the resources which you accumulate to help in this effort. Using the Fourth House you can build a psychological base to create a personality foundation for a worldly expression of your life.

Accumulation involves the amassing of material resources to help you get through life. The Fourth House represents the type of home you choose to live in, and how you care for this home, its importance to you, its nature, style, usages, etc. The way you accumulate and store your household goods within the home is also shown through the Fourth House. But, the Fourth House represents more than just your physical home. It also shows the space you set aside about you and the importance you attach to this personal space. The Fourth House shows how you nurture this space, and the thought and effort you may put into protecting its privacy. This space may extend through your home, your property, your work area, or wherever you feel a need for it.

The Fourth House represents things of the past: history, culture, tradition, folklore, etc. It is through the Fourth House that these are bought forth from the depths of your being and into your life. The Fourth House is the basis you use for projecting the thoughts of your prior experiences into your current world. Things which you hold sentimental, such as your fondest memories, have a Fourth House representation. There is also a call to the middle way, the ordinary, or the commonplace through the Fourth House. Here you can find the expectations which the average person has about you or your services.

Merchandising and sale transactions are also shown here. This involves the efforts you are willing to endure to have goods sold or traded. Part of merchandising is the creation of the goods for sale. Agricultural products especially have their sources shown through the Fourth House. The Fourth House can show the abundance of goods available, their quality and condition, and the intrinsic worth these goods may have in the market place.

The Fourth House shows what kinds of things you hold emotionally close. Your attachment to objects and what value these objects have is also shown here. Your means of attachment and holding, your means of acquisition, your means of accumulation, and your means of protecting what is yours, are all shown here. The Fourth House represents the hold you have on your possessions, or vice versa, and what you may do to protect these possessions.

An Overview of the Fifth House

A Succedent House of the First Quadrant
Placed in the Right and Lower Hemispheres

Giving or receiving love or romantic feelings is an important part of the Fifth House. Some feel the Fifth House reveals all kinds of love, but love is a complex and psychologically diverse emotion. The Fifth House rules romantic love, the Eighth House sexual love, the Eleventh House brotherly love, etc. Giving or finding love can occupy much time and effort. Pursuing romantic love is a Fifth House topic which can occupy an entire lifetime. Romance involves the fabrication (i.e., creation) of a mood, a setting, a frame of mind which takes self away from daily cares into more pleasurable areas. Learning to take self above the trials of life to a realm where pleasure replaces pain is a Fifth House activity. The Fifth House does not ask you to abandon life's battles, but to elevate them to internal levels where you can find inner satisfaction and pleasure from meeting and conquering them.

You may face both pleasant or unpleasant things in life. The Fifth House traditionally rules many pleasant categories of life, but it still may not be an easy house to master. Mastery of self and self's goals is a central Fifth House theme. To attain mastery, you must thoroughly understand what you need to master. You must learn all about yourself before you can achieve self-mastery. You must learn to use your talents and also how to capitalize on your capabilities. Other people may have a greater awareness of who you are than you do. But, other people's ideas about how you should develop or what you should do in life may not match your feelings. Mastery of self comes with maturity. Mastery of your problems involves sorting and prioritizing demands of life. These are Tenth House and Sixth House issues. Through the Sun as primary ruler, the Fifth House's influence spreads into other houses. Fifth House issues go to the very core and depth of your personality. As the second house of the Fourth House, the Fifth House shows how you mold the inner self's yearnings into issues which define you. Developing self's abilities and creativity starts here.

The children (either your biological children or those assigned to your care as a teacher, a guardian, etc.) you produce or influence become a major part of your external Fifth House projections. These children, their rearing, their molding, their teaching, the care given them, the values imparted to them, etc. are central Fifth House issues. The care and the time you take to teach children values may be returned to you through Fifth House astrological patterns. Your legacy lives on through the values and lessons you give to others. Interests in becoming a proficient teacher are also a Fifth House concern.

The Fifth House represents many forms of entertainment, like theater, sports, gambling, stock market investing, etc. Games and other forms of play can also become a part of daily work and career. Through the Fifth House you are asked to create entertainment from routine tasks. You may find that you are happiest when you enjoy tasks while doing them. The Fifth House can teach you that much contentment and satisfaction can come from your internal attitudes about life. Happiness may generate prosperity. When success surrounds you, people and opportunities seek you out. Luck, prizes, winnings, etc. are tied to the Fifth House. If you can master self through your Fifth House, then the lucky breaks and prizes of life can come to you. Be careful not to let the games you create with life control you, but instead work to find an inner joy from your tasks. Being true to your self can bring much inner happiness.

Interest in the theater or dramatics is a part of the Fifth House's scope. The Fifth House rules how you emotionally relate to things which you feel are important. The Fifth House prompts you to project contrived emotionalism (i.e., theatrics) into life's activities. The Fifth House asks you to bare the core or central you to the world. This can include developing your sense of humor, or an ability to laugh at or with life. The Fifth House contains many keywords which involve the expression of emotion, like dynamics, celebrations, applause, affection, matters of the heart, performances, spontaneity, humor, etc. A strong Fifth House may not make you a successful actor or actress, but it can heighten your interest in the emotional expression of your creations. Emotional expression is not solely derived from the Fifth House activity, but mastery of lessons here may better help you express your feelings.

The Fifth House shows what kind of activities bring you pleasure and joy. Through the Fifth House you can learn to find enjoyment or satisfaction from the routine tasks of life. You can gain satisfaction from whatever you must face in life -- no matter how unpleasant it may seem at first. The Fifth House helps you find inner joy beyond any suffering you may feel as life's events demand your attention and resources. The Fifth House helps you transport yourself from the depths of emotional despair to the heights of any fulfillment as you encounter life's experiences. The Fifth House can help you find spontaneity and fun in life no matter how routine activities force you to do unwanted things.

Another important Fifth House issue is popularity -- your popularity. Popularity involves being able to relate to others in meaningful ways. You can not demand popularity or success. Popularity includes appearing before others in ways which identify your uniqueness. The Fifth House reflects inner attitudes toward acquiring fame. If you encourage idolization you may mirror a lack of inner esteem. If you demand hero worship you may find rejection of other creative efforts. The best way to work with the Fifth House is to seek inner happiness by cheerfully bearing with the tasks or tribulations of life. Popularity or fame may then follow. Learn to live with what you receive, but learn to live your life in ways which you find personally satisfying. Satisfaction from doing ordinary tasks is important. Creating play from work is necessary too. Have fun enjoying the tasks, obligations, or pleasures which life sends your way.

An Overview of the Sixth House

A Cadent House of the First Quadrant
Placed in the Right and Lower Hemispheres

Cadent houses help spur an evolution of inner personal qualities which ultimately benefit society. Attributes like productivity, attitude toward work, services willingly given, duty assumed or assigned, and hygiene (in all forms) are such Sixth House traits. The Sixth House is also associated with illness, diet, healing, nutrition, food preparation, food served, clothing, tools, analysis, coping with stress, and domestic pets. The Sixth House has an affinity with the zodiacal sign of Virgo and the yin side of the planet Mercury.

The Sixth House imparts an inner restlessness about attitudes or positions taken toward work, assignments, duties, chores, etc. Perhaps you feel that your contributions are never quite psychologically acceptable. This could raise personal insecurities, and if nurtured may affect your health. Your nervous system may over react to private fears of inadequacy or rejection. Nurturing or encouraging, or addressing and stopping such insecurities, is a Sixth House lesson. Feeling insecure and working harder to gain recognition or acceptance in life is a positive process. Feeling insecure and letting this vulnerability ruin your health through worry is a less positive Sixth House theme. One need not follow from the other. The Sixth House does not cause illness. It does not mirror illness. Illness is an internal issue which may arise from misplaced stress or worry about issues such as fear of rejection, constant worry, general insecurity, etc. Such results may then be shown through the Sixth House.

The Sixth House reflects your work attitudes, not the actual work you do. It does not show your choice of career; it shows your feelings about employment. Your career choice should be based upon your general educational and employment skills, not just any Sixth House astrological emphasis. You probably have several skills which others may find employable. These skills are shown throughout the horoscope, not just in the Sixth House. When using astrology to help you with career choices consider your entire potential, not what one element offers. Prospective employers want to hire the entire person and all their capabilities, not just their Sixth House.

Taking personal responsibility for your work output is an important Sixth House trait. The Sixth House prompts for an improvement of self through applied discipline. Improving your self-image by taking responsibility for your efforts is a Sixth House activity. If what you produce does not meet another's expectations, then maybe the expectations were too high. Maybe you did not produce well enough. Maybe you could not meet your own expectations. It is how you handle both your internally generated rejection and the possible rejection from others which is mirrored by the Sixth House. The Sixth House does not criticize you, it leaves that to your own inclinations.

The Sixth House encourages development of qualities like devotion to tasks, dedication, loyalty, faithfulness, allegiance, etc. Through the Sixth House you are asked to constantly reexamine your internal commitment to people, tasks, etc. Sometimes you are forced to make internal compromises about this commitment, and sometimes these compromises may cause psychological or physical stress. Unconsciously this stress can build and may appear as various forms of illness. The illness may become real or it may be imagined. This is a typical Sixth House process. To use the Sixth House positively, recognize that stress can accumulate if it is not addressed or relieved. Alleviate that which causes stress by refusing to nurture stress building attitudes. Turn a Sixth House potential illness into a healing process.

The efficient functioning of your body, your being, or your organism is a Sixth House matter. The Sixth House prompts you to examine your life, your lifestyle, the personal satisfaction you get from your work, living, etc. This process of examination and reexamination is a never ending one. You are called to look at the efficiency of your output, your work methods, your loyalty -- every aspect of your working or interdependent relationships with others, including the efficient functioning of your body. Whenever there are blockages or stoppages, known or unknown, the Sixth House has a way of bringing these to your attention. This may cause some stress or illness in those cases when Sixth House matters are not correctly addressed.

People who are dependent on you, like employees, co-workers, servants, domestics, etc. are shown through your Sixth House. These dependents offer loyalty and dedication and in return they expect fair treatment and appreciation of their efforts. They also expect discipline when they are out of line or when they do not perform to expectations.

Diet, food, and dietary interests also fall under the Sixth House. The diet which is best for you is that diet which most efficiently uses your body type. Some people prefer to eat light foods, some demand heavy foods. Some like to fast while others would not miss a meal. Another person's diet or fare of food is not necessarily your diet or fare. It is your responsibility to find and follow a dietary regimen which suits you best. There is more to choosing diet than astrology. Consider also heredity, environment, lifestyle, religious preferences, glandular inclinations (e.g., pituitary body type, thyroid type, pancreas type), etc. The way you choose and practice diet and body cleansing is shown by your Sixth House.

Expect to meet feedback from your body when it is unhappy with the way it is either being treated or ignored.

The Sixth House covers many important areas of life. Learn to reexamine your life from diet to work to dedication by learning about your Sixth House.

Houses of the SECOND Quadrant

Seventh House

Working with others is your choice,
Acting jointly, as with one voice,
Calling loudly for the world to see,
Joint efforts done between you and me.

Eighth House

Control and exchange versus trust,
Complex questions — thoughts of lust,
Learn respect for deaths far side
Or reincarnate with gain denied.

Ninth House

Go beyond all, expand your mind,
Live life fully, there's worlds to find,
Make it legal, but don't get caught
Publishing opinion lacking deep thought.

An Overview of the Seventh House

An Angular House of the Second Quadrant
Placed in the Right and Upper Hemispheres

The Seventh House involves seeking out and winning the cooperation of others (i.e., partners) for your purposes, and the participation, interaction, opposition, or arguments you receive in return. Shaping and honing efforts to convince others that your ideas or efforts are worthy starts with the Seventh House. It is difficult to convince others that your ideas are worthy if you do not sincerely believe in them. Burden sharing or mutual helping ideas dominate Seventh House keywords. Sharing as used here means convincing others that your views should also be their views. Competition starts when another person airs different views from yours. Bouncing around among cooperation, compromise, and competition: welcome the Seventh House.

Cooperation involves the pursuit of goals in common with others. Cooperation invites comparison between differing methods or ideas. Compromise between opposing views and subsequent agreement is a Seventh House matter. The Seventh House reflects inner attitudes about ideas like compromise, harmony, agreement, etc. When these attitudes are expressed with anger, uncertainty, abruptness, superiority of purpose, etc., then similar emotions may be returned to you. The Seventh House does not guarantee that you will see fairness from others returned for your efforts. Rather it promises that others may return to you only what they feel you deserve.

Compromise implies that some middle ground exists around which opposing views can be reconciled. Keywords like equality, mutuality, counterpart, clarification, and alternatives are found in the Seventh House. Compromise and reconciling different views involves creating increased harmony between parties — especially those who feel that they have the same views or ideas. Emotionally strong opinions are often expressed when setting ideas forth. Different people may express different ways of working toward something. Bringing agreement to differing views where only a common purpose exists is a central Seventh House issue. The learning of this lesson lies not in whether you compromise but in how you work on achieving agreement.

Obstruction, blockage, or withdrawal are negative counterparts to agreement. The Seventh House calls for parties to work around their obstacles and find compromise. The Seventh House calls for working through the interference which arises between parties. The Seventh House calls for working through disagreement and finding mutual satisfaction. Turning dilemma into harmony is preferred to turning partnership into warfare. How any particular outcome is reached is primarily controlled by the person who best understands how to work with their Seventh House functions.

Behavior and manners are Seventh House topics. Intentionally blocking someone's efforts, throwing an emotional tantrum, correcting a child's behavior, trying to impress another with your character, or breaching an unknown rule of etiquette — these each call for you to face Seventh House topics. Your recovery from either failure or stupidity in social situations may be done by increasing your Seventh House awareness. A social mistake does not mean public failure. Despite such blunders you may still win agreement if you can effectively soothe the emotions of the allegedly injured parties. Learning inter-personal skills, overcoming social faults, and progressing with understanding others are called for with Seventh House insight. Gaining harmony and agreement is one key to getting successful interaction between people. The way you act can influence how others either help you or fight you.

The Seventh House represents relationships, partnerships, and togetherness. It especially represents a formal or legal marriage partnership. Marriage involves a social, legal, or religious teaming. The purpose of a religious marriage is to create a family atmosphere for the raising of children. It demands you produce surroundings where each partner's values can be imparted to offspring. The purpose of a marriage in business is to create cooperation while increasing market share. The purpose of a marriage between political entities is to create a union of ideas. Matrimony implies that a legal or religious sanction has been given to a union. But, the Seventh House is only concerned with how the union is created and worked, not its legal status.

Social involvements imply a loose arrangement among peoples for mutual protection or expansion. The growth of society usually benefits some people more than others. While equality may be stated as a reason for urging greater union or cooperation between groups, inequality of social groups may really be intended. Effecting union or agreement does not imply that unbiased goals are being sought. Fairness is an attribute which we must be constantly strive for to offset potential conflict. Open conflict, disagreement, clashes, or disapproval are just as much a part of the Seventh House as peace and harmony. Which result succeeds depends on the overall will of the participants.

The Seventh House offers you social choices. It reflects your attitudes about working with others as equals. It shows the room you demand for social maneuvering, and the bias you have toward tolerating the views of others, even when these dominate your leanings. An important lesson of the Seventh House is learning that yours is not the only credible view. Another important lesson is learning to live peacefully with the opinions of others without compromising your own interests or feelings. The Seventh House calls for equality and fairness, but it never promises these virtues. The Seventh House asks that you examine the imperfections found within your present social circumstances.

An Overview of the Eighth House

A Succedent House of the Second Quadrant
Placed in the Right and Upper Hemispheres

The Eighth House asks us to understand some deep motivations within our psyches, like needs for controlling another's feelings through demands on their material or psychological resources, the value to you of mutually sharing in another's emotions or trust, variations in personal demands designed to gain subconscious control, and personal needs for being and sharing with another. Deep: in a single word the mystery of the Eighth House can be heard. Between that compound sentence and that short word the Eighth House symbolism covers many complex human needs and personal interactions.

Central questions like the exchange of innermost feelings vs. support offered, or respect demanded vs. value offered, etc., lie at the core of Eighth House meanings. If you want sex your Eight House partner can give it. If you want control your Eight House partner can yield. If you want — whatever, you can get it! But, only for the right price — and this may be an emotional or monetary price far beyond expectations. Obligation incurred for support given becomes an important focus. The Eighth House asks whether you can demand and receive respect from another — even if you promise to pay for that respect with money, promises, pledges, etc. Can the offer of some present or future compensation control another's loyalty? This is an Eighth House question.

The Eighth House covers exchanges like where an offer of an emotional gift is made, and the receiver is then presented with the dilemma of accepting that offer and paying some emotional or monetary price for the exchange, or rejecting the offer and perhaps incurring wrath for the refusal of a good-faith gift. Sex is an exchange. Reciprocation: Is what you gave me equal to what I gave you? Is what you offer to me equal to what I offer to you? Interchange: can I share and willingly offer you my inner self without having to worry if you will waste my gift? Retaliation: if you waste (in my thinking) what I gave you then what price shall I extract from you for this spoilage? Compensation: if I extend you love and support, will you grant me a legacy? Swapping: if I pay you money for a service will I receive what I expect for this exchange? Giving: if I share my talents with you will you appreciate me more for having freely given them?

Complex questions all. No easy answers here. The Eighth house does not offer easy answers. It does not even point the way to find any answers, much less easy ones. It only offers human situations which create questions and then more questions. How they are answered, their ramifications, their continuance, their resolution, etc., — these are yours to determine. One person may offer love in exchange for sex, while another may offer sex in exchange for love. Whether this is an equal exchange or not does not concern the Eighth House. The Eighth house only raises the question of whether you feel this exchange is equal or not. The resolution of whether equality was reached is for you to resolve.

Any removal of emotions, goods, people, garbage, etc., is an Eighth House matter. Even to the removal of self from the body at death. Does the Eighth House show death? Does it show the time of death? Does it show an impending death. No, not necessarily, but it may under some circumstances be activated for such matters. However, it is into removal very strongly. The Eighth House rules removal and its subtleties like eradication, disconnection, uprooting, amputating, transferring, deposing, and subtraction. One idea behind removal is transformation. This may be a psychological exchange with the subsequent release of a part of self which needed releasing, or it may be the destruction of another's property through direct action like carnage, or an indirect action like contamination. Add into this any idea which lowers the value of an object, and you will be in an Eighth House realm. Warnings given for displeasure felt, like the buzzing of a rattlesnake's rattles, is an Eighth House subject.

Removal of the self from the body in any form presents a mystery, and good mysteries are tied to the Eighth House. The mystery of what happens through death, the process of death, the questions raised by the concept of afterlife, re-incarnation, soul travel, etc., all have an Eighth House rulership. How can a person split their mind and gain access to a non-physical realm of information? How can a person remove themselves from their body while another soul takes over and gives discourses or teachings? What is involved in the process of creating a soul? Where do souls come from? Where do they go at death? How can you accept the concept of soul on faith alone? These are the types of mysteries which the Eighth House presents. It also give a means for their resolution (i.e., providing some easily stated answers), but not their explanation (i.e., how can this be done). A person can use their Eighth House to allegedly give information from a disincarnate spirit, but they can not necessarily explain clearly how they do this. Do it — don't worry about the reason or cause. This is the Eighth House, look for understanding in the Ninth House.

The Eighth House concerns itself with any process of distillation, extraction, removal (again — that Eighth House word!), investigation, probing, or analysis. Getting to the depth, the innards, the core of anything is an Eighth House concern. Simple answers are not good enough; good answers only raise more questions; enlightened answers require deeper thinking and that is an Eighth House trip. Oh, the Eighth house is frustrating because it doesn't provide answers, it only provides further material which then raises additional questions. However, without the Eighth House prodding us to look deeper within self, at life, or at various mysterious realms, just imagine how boring life would be. We need the Eighth House to confront us with the very things which we are unwilling or unable to face in life. How can it do this to us!?!

An Overview of the Ninth House

A Cadent House of the Second Quadrant
Placed in the Right and Upper Hemispheres

The Ninth House urges you to seek out and unearth new experiences in life. It encourages you to experiment with life by going beyond your present boundaries. Discover and then explore new worlds which lie beyond your present thinking or knowledge. Learn about new feelings or vistas. Dare to travel to foreign areas and see how other people live. Challenge yourself to live for some time among unfamiliar customs or with different ways of thinking. Discover the values which lay behind other cultures. Hear their stories. Gain some insight into their theologies. Dust off your wanderlust and pack its suitcase. Expand, travel, experience, learn, meet, encounter, appreciate, or compare what the universe offers to what you presently know. Broaden yourself. Dare yourself to expand your present mental concepts. Discover the Ninth House.

Expanding your mind to learn new things can be done through education, travel, or just by simply experiencing common events as new directions. The Ninth House rules learning in a formal sense, as at a college, but it also rules the experiences you gain from living life and learning from its many variations. The Ninth House challenges you to take advantage of a universe of opportunity. It presents you with an abstract version of life — not concrete examples. It urges you to explore the variations of nature which may lie behind the various legends or myths which comprise mankind's collective unconscious memories. You are asked to seek out different viewpoints by your Ninth House. You are presented with a vast array of choices, alternatives, options, etc. Explore ideas or worlds!

Expanding your consciousness is directly tied to creating a definition of deity for your lifestyle and individual purposes. Deity may be a complex and emotionally loaded word to you personally, but it remains an important Ninth House concept. Deity can represent an omnipotent and powerful male-oriented God who oversees all aspects of life. Deity may mean a basis for natural knowledge which permeates existence. Deity may mean only a few or maybe a whole related series of images who represent elfin-like spirits, animals, plant life, trees, rocks, etc. From the concept of the "Great Spirit" referred to by the American Indians, to the multiple images of Hindu divinities, to the inner enlightenment sought by meditators, the concept of deity certainly is diverse.

Seeking inner unfolding may or may not have anything to do with the image of god to you. The concept of what your god is may simply be ignored or denied, may be complex, may be based entirely on Biblical concepts, may be explained as "science," or whatever. God concepts can explain many things which are otherwise difficult to define. It may be easier to blame a deity for events beyond your control than face responsibility for the consequences of your actions. Suppose your child causes a terrible incident where several people die, and you are legally called to account as the responsible guardian. You may psychologically feel that "god" caused this to happen to you. You may feel this is your child's responsibility. You may feel that the civil authorities are unjustly persecuting you. The temper of this event presents a strong Ninth House exposure. Your ability to handle this may depend on your moral courage.

The Ninth House rules such moral courage, and also abstract principles, fate, karma, worship, religious pursuits, belief structures, benedictions, penances, inner unfolding, meditation, etc. Whether you resolve complex god caused dilemmas by seeking absolution (a Roman Catholic reaction), meditating for an answer (a new age reaction), seeking psychological help for self or another (a scientific answer), or whatever, Ninth House influences continue. Deity or god concepts may not seem important to you when you are hungry or looking for financial support, but how you treat, define, and use god concepts in life may be extremely important in defining your personal ethics, philosophy, truths, basic understanding about how life works, etc. There is no one correct answer to solving life's mysteries. The Ninth House doesn't say that any one philosophy is better than another, but it does ask that you create a philosophical basis for defining your lifestyle. Philosophy, advice, and opinion are Ninth House words.

Through the Ninth House you can become involved with the acquisition of knowledge. Knowledge can come in many different forms, such as knowledge gained from travel, knowledge gained from the study of ancient cultures, knowledge gained from participating in sports, etc. The pursuit of knowledge in a formal way is ruled by the Ninth House — especially where there is an official recognition of this deed, like the award of a diploma, conducting a graduation ceremony, the awarding of a scholastic degree, etc. The Third House rules learning about anything. It also rules the knowledge and wisdom you gain by trying to understand the consequences lying behind your experiences.

The Ninth House rules all aspects of the law, systems of justice, the courts, judges, etc. The rules and machinery of the legal system are Ninth House matters. This especially includes ceremonies of any type which legalize or officially sanction anything. This could include events like the blessing of a fishing fleet by a religious person, a formal retirement parade for a governmental official, opening day ceremonies, a woodland-type spring ritual, the setting of a judicial precedent, etc. Words or ideas like legalization, judgment, cause, courtroom protocol, court briefs, plea bargaining, legal maneuvers, jury selection, sentencing, judicial decisions, etc., belong to the Ninth House.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

The molding of another's opinion is a Ninth House matter. An easy way to shape thinking is to formally publish a work which is backed up by some educational or philosophical credibility. Issuing a legal decree with the force of authority behind it is another way. The ease with which you present ideas and have them accepted by others demonstrates your mastery of the Ninth House.

Houses of the THIRD Quadrant

Poetry for the Houses of this Quadrant

Tenth House

Age and time build reputation,
Authority comes when integration
Of self with cosmos and all you see
Add finishing touches just right for thee.

Eleventh House

Hopes and wishes are no new craze,
Meet your friends at clubs on days,
Pushing thoughts in political ways
While mixing in some friendly praise.

Twelfth House

Self undoing - harbor not!
Degrading thoughts are best forgot,
Bondage, punishment, let them go!
Self-development is your show.

An Angular House of the Third Quadrant

The Tenth House asks that you examine your achievements, fulfillments, completions, recognitions, accomplishments, excellence, or realizations in life. The Tenth House calls for setting high standards of conduct, and then meeting these. This includes setting and meeting goals. Often these goals are unconscious, unknown, or not well defined. Sometimes these goals are defined as business or career objectives. You probably have ambitions to improve yourself. This may include becoming more mature, learning about life, growing more tolerant about the needs or demands of others, etc. You may not even recognize that you have these as goals in life, but you should. As you gain experience you change your core self, that inner you. Change, growth, tolerance, maturity -- these are Tenth House concepts. Through living you gain insight into self and others. You may become more tolerant of the demands of others. You may find others look to you for advice or wisdom. The Tenth House rules this type of change, internal maturity, respect earned, and fulfillment.

Through the Tenth House you are exposed to the possibility of gaining credit for your achievements. This does not necessarily always mean rewards. If your prior tasks included lawbreaking then you may meet your reward (jail) here. If your tasks included using others unfairly, then your reward may be that others will treat you unjustly when your Tenth House is activated. If you have been working for years on improving self, society, or a product, then your Tenth House may bring some appropriate fulfillment or recognition. This may be continuing international recognition, or it may be only a one-time notice in a company newsletter. The Tenth House delivers only what you have worked for and deserve, nothing more or nothing less. It does not embellish. It does not glamorize. It only returns in kind what you have earned. Often it takes years for such recognition to accumulate. Thus, included in the Tenth House are ideas like aging, time, seniority, continuity, the elderly, etc. With the passage of time, maturity and wisdom may accumulate within you.

Reputation, standing, stature, or esteem are important Tenth House concepts. The Tenth House positions you so others can use or test your wisdom and maturity. Others can look up to you in ways you may not see. You may represent an authority or father figure to them. They may accept you as a boss. Gaining, using, and wielding authority over others is a Tenth House matter. The Tenth House does not give authority or recognition, but it is concerned with how you use the authority which others may grant you. It is also concerned with how you handle the rewards or recognition received from your prior activities. The reputation you build through your actions, intentions, and directives are measured by others through your Tenth House activities.

Business objectives, setting goals, administration, trying again and again despite failure are Tenth House matters. The Tenth House does not bring success. It does not guarantee recognition. It does ask you to act in socially and morally correct ways, however. If you start a business and fail, the Tenth House does not care. If you walk away from your responsibilities and cause others harm, the Tenth House does not care. But, the Tenth House will return to you, in some way eventually, exactly what you have given to others. If your business fails, and you accept responsibility, pay the bills, and work to overcome the adverse publicity and reputation, then you will be rewarded appropriately. If your business fails and you blame others for the loss, steal from the assets of others, etc., then you will also be appropriately rewarded for that too. Eventually, either the planets or the Tenth House will return your just rewards to you.

The Tenth House is concerned with the consequences of actions. If you bring trouble or hard luck to others this may be returned to you through additional blockages, bad luck, discomfort, limitations, etc. The Tenth House is concerned with the roadblocks you meet in life and how you work to overcome these. Do you hit them head on and come away bruised? Do you tend to run around them? Do you push right through them? These are the techniques of life, and techniques are not a Tenth House concern. It is, however, concerned that you meet life in your own way, live through it, grow and mature as a person, and earn your just rewards for such prior actions.

If you feel you have a meaningless role in life, then the fault lies with you, not with your Tenth House or astrology. Accomplishment and recognition in life are given for work done, not work promised. Gaining meaning from life comes from hard work and application of effort on your part. Nothing ventured, nothing gained. Astrology will not find you a satisfying career, job, employment, or feelings of fulfillment or recognition. However, it may show you when the best time is for changing employment. It will not mail your resumes. It will not go through your job interviews. It does not guarantee success. It only highlights inner needs for you to address these matters in the best way you can. If your best way is only a halfway effort then expect halfway results. If your best effort is to procrastinate, then expect that your rewards will probably be delayed too. Equal return for equal effort, and not as measured on a task by task basis, is all that the Tenth House promises. It may take another lifetime for you to get your rewards, but they will come as you have prepared for them.

The Tenth House may show delays. It may ask that you repeat your efforts so that tasks become a part of you. Taking time to age, taking time to fully learn, taking time to master tasks is what the Tenth House asks. The Tenth House is not the Midheaven or MC. The cusp of the Tenth House may be the MC depending on which house system you choose. The houses represent keyword qualities like those shown in this book. The personal sensitive points give astrological points in space useful for timing events. They are quite different.

An Overview of the Eleventh House

A Succedent House of the Third Quadrant

The Eleventh House asks that you define and resolve the many choices which you face in life. Choices mainly arise from internal desires for change. Your hopes, wishes, aspirations, expectations, longings, etc., about self, others, or circumstances, open many different possibilities for you. Urges to improve the lot of self or others, motivations for seeking change, and expectations about creating your niche in the world begin with the Eleventh House. The Eleventh House is also concerned with your perception of and attitude about humanity. It is through this house that the possibilities of having others do your bidding arises. You can find that the world is not a lonely or isolated place. There are always people willing and ready to listen to your ideas. There are always others who can create what you want if you prepare them well enough. The Eleventh House is concerned with your attitudes about how others can best serve your purposes in effecting the changes in life which you desire.

A strong Eleventh House idea involves joining with others for mutual purposes. The role of groups, assemblies, cliques, gangs, syndicates, clusters, organizations, etc., in your life is shown through here. The Eleventh House helps you focus on your need for togetherness. It places your needs for impersonal companionship into a central place in your consciousness. It helps make you aware that people can serve roles different from comfort giving, loving, or sexual relationships. Your need for others in roles outside of a one-to-one companionship are shown through the Eleventh House. Here you are able to explore your needs for affiliations. Here you are able to explore the role of groups or societies. Here you are able to gain the benefits you need from the clubs or groups which bring informal bonding relationships into your life.

Impersonal friendliness is ruled by the Eleventh house. Relationships with no emotional interchange or interference belong here. Camaraderie, brotherhood, or the banding together for friendliness or such mutual support as this can bring belongs here. Often the desire for mutual support arises because of a cabal or clique which is interested in control over others. The group may decide to use subtle forms of manipulation or control. Ideas concerning the tampering of another's freedom or rights, infringing upon another's time or resources, using others for your (or the group's) purposes, etc. belong to the Eleventh House. The use, employment, handling, manipulation, operation, or deceptive control of others for personal or group means is an Eleventh House matter. Desires for greater impersonal control belong here.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Often collaborations form because people are attracted by a cause, principle, or purpose. Shared convictions or beliefs within a group formed for mutual benefit(s) belong to the Eleventh House. Pleading for causes, seeking support for an idea, or pushing for an endorsement from others belongs here. Sometimes it is necessary to gain another's attention through boycotts, protests, or public rejections. Such mutually supported protests are an Eleventh House matter. The obstruction of another's purposes and intentions, and rejection of their concerns starts here. Forms of mutual discontent, publicly expressed, can lead to political changes. Politics is an Eleventh House word.

Any concerns involving the legislative process, civic matters, balloting, elections, political awareness, vote gathering, consensus, caucus, etc., belong in the Eleventh House. The social movements which shape politics begin through Eleventh House involvements. Conditions, compromises, riders, amendments, home rule, shaping and effecting change within the political or social system, inducements for effecting change, politics in the name of forging new alliances, etc., all belong here. The Eleventh House is concerned with effecting change. Not change for change's sake, but change because the old no longer works well and a new way of seeing current reality is needed. The shaping and molding of public opinion to effect such change also begins here.

The Eleventh House is concerned with anything new. New trends, bohemianism, non-conformist activity, trends, futuristic programs, new age matters, modern ways of shaping old ideas, etc., all belong here. Oddities, eccentricity, queer ideas, that which is unconventional or unorthodox start here. Abnormalities or deviations from established means are an Eleventh House matter. These often begin because of a seething or churning which starts an internal restlessness. Ideas and movements can become internally mixed, agitated, stirred up, blended with other forms, etc. This type of amalgamation is an Eleventh House matter. The spreading or dissemination of ideas and networking with others is an Eleventh House concern.

The Eleventh House rules any process which can help shorten work efforts. Automation, machinery, labor saving devices, stored energy devices, the vibrations caused by these devices, the pollution which results from these processes, etc., all begin here. Large machinery, office automation, assembly lines, modern production methods, protective product packaging, hydraulic or electrical or electronic labor saving devices, etc., can be found here. Here belong the computers which make our lives easier, the earth moving equipment which allows large construction, manufacturing processes which speed output, or, chemicals or products which make life easier and more efficient.

The Eleventh House may begin with discontent, either social or inner, and transform that into shaping a new way of adjusting to or living with life. Sometimes it is a sudden revelation, other times ideas come from slowly changing conditions, but it is through the Eleventh House that change is sought. Change need not be dramatic, and it need not revolutionize life, but as sure as the Eleventh House operates, such change will work its way through all of life.

An Overview of the Twelfth House

A Cadent House of the Third Quadrant

Unlike other houses which have some sharply defined but rather narrowly focused themes, the Twelfth House presents many themes. They represent parts of life or personality which can not be explained easily. Words like: charity, selfless deeds, disadvantages, isolation, self-pity, confinement, atonement, personal limitations, inevitability, pleading, drugs, freeing, forgiveness, self-imposed limits, etc., present strong images, but do not demand deep theme development. Contrast the many Twelfth House themes with the few First House issues. The variety and richness of the many subtle Twelfth House word forms shows through with an incredible diffusion.

Because of the variety of its themes the Twelfth House is not easy to understand. One way to master your Twelfth House is to consider each of its themes separately. Do not try to group or categorize these variations because by its very nature the Twelfth House does not want this. The Twelfth House asks that you learn about it by indirectly absorbing its meanings through a different side of your brain than that part which demands linear and thorough rigidity. Picture the Twelfth House themes, but do not try to strictly define them. Feel the themes as they call for attention, but do not try to analyze them. Meditate on the themes, but when explaining them to others ask that these people absorb them in their own way -- not from your definitions. The Twelfth House deals with the subjective, the inner, the changing part of inner definitions -- not the pre-defined, pre-canned, pop analysis given in two paragraphs or less.

What are these many themes? Should we start our Twelfth House paragraph definitions with ideas like escape, confinement, bondage, remote consequences, aid, rehabilitation, or, ..., well the list is just too long. The words are in the adjacent word lists, start there! The problem with choosing just a representative set of Twelfth House ideas is that there are no few, simple typical themes which clearly show all Twelfth House meanings. There are many such complex ideas. Some of these ideas have whole scholarly books written about them. Read the books, yes, but better still, define these themes in your own way, for an inner and personal definition of the Twelfth House is requested.

You may wish to start with the many Twelfth House words which deal with the theme of escape. Escape from reality using drugs. Escape from people into isolation. Escape from scenes of poverty by impersonal works of charity. Escape from hidden problems by avoiding the issues. Escape from disappointment with your lot in life by ignoring self-development. Escape from personal limitations by hiding behind a disability. Escape from sorrow or grief by blaming others for conspiring against you. Escape by explaining that others caused your sorrows. The Twelfth House shows a diversity which lies beyond written, pictured, or explained definitions. Discover your own way to be alone within self by defining how you should learn your Twelfth House.

You may wish to start with some Twelfth House ideas which deal with personal limitations. This can mean setting up strong internal psychological barriers which are very artfully and craftily woven by unconscious parts of self. Better than any chains, better than any prison, the mental mind-set you create can limit you to narrow definitions of life. They are uniquely yours. Break through them by using your Twelfth House astrological knowledge! Know that through the Twelfth House you have to face the barriers which you create for yourself. Break through your own barriers. Use your Ninth House vision to look beyond them. The Ninth House is the sister (or, brother) house of the Twelfth House. They work as an integrated pair because they each share Neptune and Jupiter as their planetary rulers. If you don't like the yin side of your Neptune energies then work through its yang side. If you don't like your yang Jupiter then work through its yin side, etc. It may take you a lifetime to break old patterns and weave new ones but realize that the future realities you can create for yourself hold either your redemption or further confinement.

Many Twelfth House themes deal with confinement, serious illness or hospitalization, institutions which continue practices which you may feel bind you, conspiracies by government or authority to hold you back, etc. Your rigidity of Twelfth House definition holds you back -- not societal conspiracy. As an individual you are a part of society, yet you are beyond society too. Where does happiness start? Within self, or doled out by a seemingly impersonal society? If you thwart or break the rules of society you may be punished, perhaps even severely. But who made you break these rules? Did some God or Devil magically appear and point angrily at you, shouting for you to break society's rules, harm others, wreak destruction, cause misery, etc.? Is this how you see life? Or, did your thinking go astray? Did you start to weave a barrier around you which says that you are unliked, in a disadvantaged position, not able to cope as well as others, have a handicap, etc. This is the deception of the Twelfth House. This is how personal limitations begin. Break out of your self-imposed personal limitations. Recognize that just as easily as you create them you can dissolve them. Learn from the issues of the Twelfth House.

Examine the Twelfth House word lists in this book if you want to learn more about the Twelfth House. See the variety and richness of the words presented and study these Twelfth House themes. You may not like to face some of these issues, but that is another matter entirely. You will have to face them sometime in your life, and the sooner you make peace with these issues the sooner your Twelfth House will give you some peace. Unlike other houses the Twelfth House does not demand anything of you except that you define and face all Twelfth House issues in your own way.

INDUSTRY CATEGORIES

© 1996, Michael Munkasey

These industry groupings have a number from 01 to 12 associated with them. This number represents the house rulership assigned to each industry. This house rulership can also be associated to a sign or planet rulership by equating the house with the appropriate sign (e.g., 01 = Aries; 06 = Virgo), or planet ruler of that sign (e.g., Mercury rules Gemini and Virgo, Saturn rules Capricorn and Aquarius [traditionally]).

AN ASTROLOGICAL HOUSE FORMULARY

Michael P. Munkasey

© 1989 by NCGR. This is an edited reprint of my article which appeared in the Winter 1988 NCGR Journal. Used with permission. Note: definitions of some of the technical terms used appear at the end of Appendix A.

OVERVIEW

Don't believe that the theory behind astrological house systems is unknowable. Like incantations from bearded gurus the mathematical reasoning which creates astrological houses appears esoteric. Once you realize that the mathematics of deriving house cusps is unremarkable, the mystery fades. Concentrate on the usage and meanings of the houses in your astrological practice, but learn something too about how the houses come together. This article is about that other side of houses: their technical descriptions and mathematical formulations. Early in my astrological studies I was given a wonderful chance to mathematically derive the various house systems. My curiosity compelled me to bring some order where I could find no reasonable or consistent information. There were few references on astrological house construction then, and I was driven to understand the thinking behind the various house systems.

This article is intended both to educate and provide specific information about calculating house cusps for the more popular house systems. Short written descriptions and formulae for all popular house systems and the seven personal sensitive points follow. The word descriptions of the house systems are brief, but each house system is rigidly and consistently described to allow you to calculate its house cusps. To quickly find success I recommend the use of a hand calculator or computer language with the trigonometric functions. Otherwise, only normal high school mathematics is required to calculate house cusps.

MY HISTORY OF INVOLVEMENT

Contrary to the opinions of many who know me I was not well equipped psychologically to do this work. While I enjoyed arithmetic while in school, I did not have much formal learning in the type of mathematics needed for this study . I had to re-learn theories which I had either long ago conveniently forgotten, or had never formally learned. I started for all of the normal reasons. I wanted to understand why astrologers used different house systems; which house system was the mathematically best to use (a foolish pursuit it turns out); what the difference was among the various house systems; the role of houses and of space; what role houses have in astrology; how to find better ways to compute the various house cusps, etc. This last was particularly important because my work was being done in the era before personal computers or programmable calculators, and using logarithms to compute house cusps was a long and disagreeable task. So, necessity being the mother of invention, I forged into areas where others had not adequately left instructions for proceeding.

Months of effort later I had managed to find descriptions for 24 house systems in the astrological literature. Many astronomical drawings were made to show perspective from space on these houses systems. Doing this helped me find two general approaches for creating house systems: start with a point on the ecliptic and divide the ecliptic according to a systematic scheme. This gives fairly consistent houses. The Equal House System is one such example: the ascendant (ASC) is the starting point and thirty degree increments are added to the ASC for each subsequent house cusp. This is an easy system to use, requires only a minimum of mathematics, and works anywhere there is an ecliptic visible. Having an ecliptic visible becomes an important consideration, especially in the far polar regions where distortions in space around the ecliptic are magnified, and an ecliptic may not be mathematically present on the eastern horizon. The second system requires using one of the other great circles of astronomy, dividing that in some defined manner, and then projecting that division onto the ecliptic. This creates projection house systems like Placidian and Regiomontanus. The Koch house system is a variation on the projection house system approach, and I classify by itself while terming its approach to the mathematics of houses 'intersection.'

WHAT HOUSES ARE

Houses are the divisions of space around an event. An event occurs. It may be a birth, it may be a mundane event, it may be a horary question, etc. It occurs and astrologers wish to erect a horoscope for that event. The next step is to locate the planets in the signs and houses. First we find the location of the planets using an ephemeris, and then we diagram them in their space using a selected house system. So, an event occurs, and now we must create a frame for picturing the planets within their space. Questions arise. How should we divide this space? What is our starting point for this division? How do we translate planets in a solar orbit into an earth framed reference? What about the parts of the sky we can not see -- like those parts that are on the other side of the earth? How do we represent those 'hidden' spaces? Since space is rather 'plastic', and if we can change our view of the event depending where in space we are viewing from, then what constant boundaries can we create for classifying the space around the event?

These questions have deep philosophical leanings and may be solved when an astronomical diagram of a horoscope is drawn. The diagrams can clarify what the houses look like, but they can not answer the question of which house system to use. (See Chapter 5 for some help with that.) One horoscope produced usually implies that one house system was chosen for dividing space. Another horoscope of the same event may use a completely different house system. But the nagging side issue question always remains: which house system is best to use?

There is no simple or direct answer to that question. However, I can give you two good thoughts on the subject: use that house system which divides space in such a way that the planets fall into houses which describe their function in the nature of the event; and, use that house system which gives cusps against which you can time events. That is, if the Moon function of this event is described well by a Moon in the eighth house, then the house system you choose should not place the Moon in the seventh or ninth, or some house other than the eighth house. Also, if subsequent events can not be timed to the house cusps derived mathematically and plotted on the horoscope, then choose some other house system. In general, I find that for natal events the Placidian system works well and fulfills these two guidelines. Why it works well I do not know. It may well be that the thought form created by a mass of astrologers using the Placidian system is all that lies behind its functioning. I can not explain why it works, but my practical side allows me to see that it does work well and consistently for natal events where it is used and applied. For events other than natal, other house systems seem to work better. Other house systems can also work well with natal events besides the Placidian. The question of which house system to use is more thoroughly addressed in Chapter 5.

HOUSES VS. THE PERSONAL SENSITIVE POINTS

One confusing issue concerns the difference between house cusps and the personal sensitive points. The primary difference between these in a horoscope is that houses show wedges or divisions of space while the personal sensitive points represent time. Looking at the space around an event it quickly becomes evident that many different astronomically defined frameworks for dividing space can be created. Four astronomical planes can help us mathematically divide space, the: ecliptic, equatorial, horizon, and lunar planes. Each of these planes contributes to the order of placing planets in space. Each of these planes divide space and time in ways that are astrologically meaningful. More importantly, though, the mathematical intersections of these planes gives us eight rigidly defined sets of places where peaks or points can gather energy and potential. Refer to these places as the personal sensitive points with the names: the ascendant (ASC), the MC (or Medium Coeli), the equatorial ascendant (EQA) [popularly, but incorrectly, called 'the east point'], the vertex (VTX), the co-

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

ascendant (CAS), the polar ascendant (PAS), the Aries point (ARI) , and the Moon's node (NOD). (See also Chapter 1.)

Each of these points has a pair, and one part of the pair can not be thought of without also considering its companion: the ascendant has its descendant; the MC has its IC; etc. The pairings of the points are unchangeable -- because one side exists by definition, so does the other. The points and their pair names are listed in Chapter 1. Further, each personal sensitive point is formed when some great astronomical circle from one of the four levels or planes mentioned above intersects the ecliptic. There are only eight ways this can be done, and there are only eight sets of personal sensitive points. Each is astrologically equal to the other in strength and function -- but not all are equally well defined in popular astrological literature. Since the outer edge of a horoscope shows the ecliptic, then places where the ecliptic is astronomically intersected should be astrologically important.

The mathematical definitions for the personal sensitive points follow. They are not difficult to compute, requiring only the local sidereal time (LST) of an event, its early latitude, and a table of ascendants and MC's, or the formulae and a full functioned calculator or computer. With just a little practice you can calculate the personal sensitive points (except the Moon's node) in less than two minutes. With the formulae tables are not needed. The definitions for these points may be addressed in other works.

ASTRONOMICAL CONSIDERATIONS

In the astronomy defining an event, there are great circles which divide the sphere of space into logical parts. These great circles are called: meridian, horizon, prime vertical, celestial equator, polar axis circle, ecliptic, and horizon. The Moon's nodes are a special case, where the plane of the Moon's motion defines these where it cuts the ecliptic. All of the houses and sensitive points used in astrology are a result of these circles or mathematical derivatives from these circles where these circles or their derivatives cut the ecliptic. You may wish to use the notes and definitions at the end of this article for a reference.

House systems use the great circles of astronomy as starting points for their definitions and also for projection purposes. Having a good understanding of the astronomy of the horoscope does help in being able to visualize the construction of the individual house systems. The guides and definitions at the end of this article may help clarify these terms. Some house systems have more than one name. While I have searched diligently to compile a list of all house systems described in popular literature, I may have inadvertently overlooked some. I apologize in advance to those authors for my omission. Do not dwell too strongly on the word definitions which, admittedly, are short. It is the mathematics which really define the houses systems. I tried to show the mathematics clearly and consistently, but I may have inadvertently made some errors. I wish to thank Gary Duncan, Neil Michelsen, Rob Hand, Michael Erlewine, and George Noonan for their assistance with this effort when it was in its formative stages.

WRITTEN DEFINITIONS OF THE INDIVIDUAL HOUSE SYSTEMS

THE ALCIBITIUS DECLINATION HOUSE SYSTEM

(Sometimes spelled 'Alcabitius'). The diurnal arc of the ascendant is tri-sected and projected by hour circles onto the ecliptic to form the house cusps.

THE ALCIBITIUS SEMI-ARC HOUSE SYSTEM

The diurnal arc of the ascendant is tri-sected and projected by vertical circles onto the ecliptic to form the house cusps.

THE ARCTURAN HOUSE SYSTEM

The horizon circle is cut at thirty degree intervals starting at the east point of the horizon, and these points are projected onto the ecliptic using longitude circles.

THE CAMPANUS HOUSE SYSTEM

The prime vertical is cut at thirty degree intervals starting at the east point of the horizon, and these points are projected onto the ecliptic using house circles.

THE CLASSICAL HOUSE SYSTEM

The diurnal arc of the ascendant is tri-sected and projected by hour circles onto the ecliptic to form the house cusps, but five degrees is subtracted from the ASC to form the first house cusp. This slight correction to the Alcibitius Declination house system described above was used in antiquity to correct for observational effects due to atmospheric refraction close to the horizon.

THE EARTH HOUSE SYSTEM

Zero degrees of Libra is taken as the first house cusp and each house cusp is thirty degrees farther along in the zodiac.

THE EQUAL HOUSE SYSTEM

The ascendant is taken as the cusp of the first house and each house is thirty degrees further along in the zodiac. Note that in this house system the MC is not necessarily the cusp of the tenth house.

THE HORIZONTAL HOUSE SYSTEM

The horizon circle is cut at thirty degree intervals starting at the east point of the horizon, and these points are projected onto the ecliptic using vertical circles.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

THE KOCH HOUSE SYSTEM

The diurnal arc of the ascendant is tri-sected and projected by ascendant arcs onto the ecliptic to form the house cusps.

THE MC HOUSE SYSTEM

The ascendant is taken as the cusp of the first house and each house is thirty degrees further along in the zodiac. Note that in this house system the MC is not necessarily the cusp of the tenth house.

THE MERIDIAN HOUSE SYSTEM

The celestial equator circle is cut at thirty degree intervals starting at the Aries point, and these points are projected onto the ecliptic using hour circles.

THE MOON HOUSE SYSTEM

The Moon is taken as the tenth house cusp and each house cusp is thirty degrees farther along in the zodiac. Note that in this house system neither the ascendant nor the MC are necessarily house cusps.

THE MORINUS HOUSE SYSTEM

The celestial equator circle is cut at thirty degree intervals starting at the Aries point, and these points are projected onto the ecliptic using longitude circles.

THE NATURAL GRADUATION HOUSE SYSTEM

A complicated mathematical variation of the Porphyry House System, as described on pp. 46- 47 in "New Waite's Compendium" by Colin Evans.

THE NATURAL HOURS HOUSE SYSTEM

The times of sunrise and sunset are noted for the location and date of the horoscope. The degrees of the ASC at Sun rise and Sun set give the degrees of the ascendant and descendant respectively. The hemispheres between the ASC and DSC are divided into six sectors, each representing two 'hours' of time. These sectors also give the house cusps. Note that the ascendant and descendant are no longer tied together as a pair in this system, and the MC may fall in any house.

THE OCTOPOS HOUSE SYSTEM

The prime vertical is cut at forty-five degree intervals starting at the east point of the horizon, and these points are projected onto the ecliptic using house circles. This produces eight houses instead of twelve as by most other systems, and these are then numbered starting at the descendant and going counter-clockwise, so that the house placed at the seventh house is called the first house, and the house normally near the ninth house is the second house, etc. For those persons with a fear of the twelfth house, this is the one to use.

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

THE PLACIDIAN HOUSE SYSTEM

The celestial equator circle is cut at thirty degree intervals starting at the Aries point, and these points are projected onto the ecliptic using house circles. The original cusps are then recalculated in a complicated adjustment cycle which continues until no further cuspal movement is perceived. The house cusps are supposedly based on the time intervals of the rising degree, not its spatial divisions. It is mathematically very close to the Regiomontanus system which it is supposed to supplant.

THE PORPHYRY HOUSE SYSTEM

The arc between the MC and the ascendant is measured and tri-sected, with the ecliptic locations becoming the eleventh and twelfth houses. Then the arc between the ASC and IC is treated similarly for the cusps of the second and third houses. The ASC and MC are the cusps of the first and tenth houses, and the other houses are opposite paired (e.g., the 8th cusp is opposite the 2nd).

THE RADIANT HOUSE SYSTEM

Same as the Horizontal House System.

REGIOMONTANUS HOUSE SYSTEM

The celestial equator circle is cut at thirty degree intervals starting at the Aries point, and these points are projected onto the ecliptic using house circles. This is similar to the Placidian house system, but without the complicated adjustment algorithm required by that method.

THE SOLAR HOUSE SYSTEM

The position of the Sun is taken as the first house cusp and each house cusp is thirty degrees farther along in the zodiac. Note that in this house system neither the ascendant nor the MC are necessarily house cusps. This system is commonly used when the ascendant and MC are not known.

THE SUN HOUSE SYSTEM

The Sun is taken as the fourth house cusp and each house cusp is thirty degrees farther along in the zodiac. Note that in this house system neither the ascendant nor the MC are necessarily house cusps.

THE TOPOCENTRIC HOUSE SYSTEM

This is a very slight mathematical variation of the Placidian algorithm, which, supposedly, allows for a more accurate calculation of the intermediate house cusps in the polar regions.

THE ZARIEL HOUSE SYSTEM

Identical to the Meridian House system, except in name.

DEFINITION OF TERMS AND ABBREVIATIONS

BODY: A planet, a star, or some similar object which exists in space and time.

CELESTIAL EQUATOR: A great circle denoted by an extension of the Earth's equator infinitely projected into space. This is the circle along which the measurement of right ascension is made.

CELESTIAL SPHERE: That sphere which would be formed if one were to infinitely extend the 'sphere' of Earth outward into space.

CO-EQUATOR: The mirror image of the Earth's equator. The equator mathematically associated with the co-latitude of a place on Earth.

CO-LATITUDE: The number obtained when the terrestrial latitude is subtracted from ninety degrees. For the city of Philadelphia, located at forty degrees north terrestrial latitude, the co-latitude, or angular distance of Philadelphia from the Earth's North Pole, is fifty degrees.

CO-POLAR AXIS CIRCLE: The great circle formed when the mathematics used to derive the polar axis circle is mirrored from the Earth's poles, rather than from the Earth's equator.

ECLIPTIC: That great circle of the celestial sphere which the Sun traces, when seen from the Earth, in its yearly travels against the backdrop of the sky.

ECLIPTIC PLANE or SYSTEM: The mathematical plane which contains the Solar System, with the Sun as its center and its planets at the center of their motions. A sphere of space using the ecliptic as its equator.

EQUATORIAL PLANE: The mathematical plane represented by infinitely extending the Earth's equator into space.

EQUATORIAL SYSTEM: A sphere of space using the celestial equator as its main central circle or equator.

GREAT CIRCLE: A circle contained within the celestial sphere which has as its center the center point of the celestial sphere.

HORIZON: A great circle, for which there are four associated terms:Visible, Rational, Sensible, and Celestial. In the way that we use these terms, the Visible Horizon is our view of where the earth and the sky meet off in the distance from where we stand on or near the earth. The Celestial Horizon is the horizon we use mathematically as our starting point to calculate houses and sensitive points, and it is the visible horizon as if that horizon were starting at the center of the earth (as opposed to where we are located on or near the surface of the earth) and was extended infinitely into space.

HORIZON PLANE or SYSTEM: The plane which contains the horizon. The same as the celestial horizon. A sphere of space, with the Celestial Horizon serving as its equator. See also: Horizon.

HOUR CIRCLE: A great circle which is perpendicular to the Celestial Equator and which passes through a particular body in space.

HOUSE CIRCLE: A great circle which has as its poles the North and South points of the Horizon, and which is perpendicular to the Prime Vertical.

LOCAL SIDEREAL TIME: The time calculated for a horoscope when a time of event is added to the longitude correction, the time zone correction, the acceleration, the delta T correction, and the sidereal time from an ephemeris.

LONGITUDE CIRCLE: A great circle which starts at the pole of the ecliptic and travels around the Celestial Sphere perpendicular to the ecliptic. It is like a circle of longitude, but in the ecliptic system, as opposed to on a globe of the earth.

MERIDIAN: A great circle of the Horizon system which passes through the Zenith, the nadir, and the North and South points of the horizon.

NADIR: The South Pole of the horizon system. Opposed to the Zenith.

OBLIQUITY: The angle in space formed between the ecliptic and the celestial equator. Presently it is about twenty-three and a half degrees and decreasing slowly with time.

PERPENDICULAR: Ninety degrees. Circles which meet at ninety degree angles.

POLAR AXIS CIRCLE: A great circle which passes through the North and South Poles of the Earth and the East and West points of the horizon.

POLE: When describing three or four dimensional space (using time as a fourth dimension) a pole is a mathematical point that is ninety degrees everywhere from a circle. For instance, the earth's North or South Poles are ninety degrees from all points on the earth's equator.

PRIME VERTICAL: A great circle which passes through the Zenith, the Nadir, and the East and West points of the horizon. It is ninety degrees from the meridian, and vice-versa.

VERTICAL CIRCLE: A great circle which is perpendicular to the horizon and passes through the Zenith and the Nadir.

ZENITH: The North Pole of the horizon system. The point in the horizon system which is over your head. Opposed to the nadir.

ZODIAC: A small portion of the celestial sphere which is about eight degrees on either side of the ecliptic circle.

HOW TO CALCULATE HOUSE CUSPS

(© 1989 by NCGR. This reprint contains two slight modifications and corrections from the article which appeared in the Winter 1988 NCGR Journal. Used with permission.)

CALCULATION CONVENTIONS

The following standard mathematical abbreviations are used in the explanations which follow:

e	represents the obliquity of the ecliptic
f	represents the terrestrial latitude
ASC	is the ascendant
MC	is the MC
RA RAMC	is the Right Ascension of a body is the Right Ascension of the MC, etc.
F, G, J, K, and L	are working terms, unimportant astronomically
+. -, x (or, *), ÷, =	represent their normal arithmetic functions
SIN, COS, TAN, COT, etc.	represent the trigonometric functions For calculator purposes: COT = (1 ÷ TAN) and vice-versa, etc.

ARCSIN, ARCCOS, ARCTAN, etc. represent the trig inverses

$H_{11,}$ etc.	stands for the offset to compute the cusp of house eleven, etc.
$C_{11,}$ etc.	stands for the value of the cusp of house eleven, etc.

Standard computer notation parenthesis nesting conventions are used throughout the formulations. That is, three left parenthesis must be balanced by three right parenthesis. Calculations are always performed within the inner parenthesis first, and then outward to the outer parenthesis.

Persons attempting the mathematics herein should refer to reasonable reference books if they are unfamiliar with trigonometric procedures. The process of adjusting house cusp calculations for the correct trigonometric quadrant can be particularly tricky if not done with care.

House cusps which are over 360º or under 0º should be converted to lie between 0º and 360º . That is, if you compute a house cusp as being 372º then this should be changed to 12 Aries. Add 360º to any negative values or results. House cusps with values between 0º and 29.99º lie in Aries; between 30º and 59.99º in Taurus; between 60º and 89.99º degrees in Gemini, and so forth around the zodiac and through the signs.

PRELIMINARY CALCULATIONS AND THE PERSONAL SENSITIVE POINTS

1. The RAMC (the right ascension of the midheaven) is computed from Local Sidereal Time (LST) by converting time units to degree units. An example of this calculation follows:

Given an LST of 12H 15M 00S, then first convert this to a decimal form of time, or 12.25 hours. 12.25 x 15 = 183.75^{o} which is the RAMC.

Given an LST of 6H 27M 14S, then convert this to a decimal form of time, or 6.453889 hours. 6.453889 x 15 = 96.808333^{o} .

2. MC = ARCTAN (TAN (RAMC) ÷ COS e)

3. ASC = ARCCOT (- ((TAN f x SIN e) + (SIN RAMC x COS e)) ÷ COS RAMC)

4. EQA = ARCCOT (- (TAN RAMC x COS e))

5. VTX = ARCCOT (- ((COT f x SIN e) - (SIN RAMC x COS e)) ÷ COS RAMC)

6. CAS = ARCCOT (- ((COT f x SIN e) + (SIN RAMC x COS e)) ÷ COS RAMC)

7. PAS = ARCCOT (((TAN f x SIN e) - (SIN RAMC x COS e)) ÷ COS RAMC)

8. ARI The Aries Point is always zero of Aries.

9. The declination of any point on the ecliptic can be calculated from:
declination = ARCSIN (SIN (zodiacal longitude of point) x SIN e)

10. The obliquity of the ecliptic, for any date in modern times, is calculated by:
e = 23° 27′ 08.26″ - 46.845″ x T - .0059″ x T^{2} + .00181″ x T^{3}
where T is in fractions of a century from Jan 1, 1900

THE ALCIBITIUS DECLINATION HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Determine the number of zodiacal degrees between the ASC and MC:

$$L = ASC - MC$$

3. Determine the Diurnal and Nocturnal Semi-arcs:

$$D = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ L \times COS\ e)$$

$$P = 180^{o} - D$$

4. Determine these intermediate working values:

$$F = D \div 3 \qquad J = P \div 3$$

$$G = F \times 2 \qquad K = J \times 2$$

5. Compute the house cusp intervals as follows:

$$H_{11} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F \div COS\ e)$$

$$H_{12} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ G \div COS\ e)$$

$$H_{2} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ K \div COS\ e)$$

$$H_{3} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ J \div COS\ e)$$

6. Compute the individual house cusps as follows:

$$C_{10} = MC \qquad C_{4} = 180^{o} + C_{10}$$

$$C_{11} = MC + H_{11} \qquad C_{5} = 180^{o} + C_{11}$$

$$C_{12} = MC + H_{12} \qquad C_{6} = 180^{o} + C_{12}$$

$$C_{1} = ASC \qquad C_{7} = 180^{o} + C_{1}$$

$$C_{2} = ASC + H_{2} \qquad C_{8} = 180^{o} + C_{2}$$

$$C_{3} = ASC + H_{3} \qquad C_{9} = 180^{o} + C_{3}$$

THE ALCIBITIUS SEMI-ARC HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Determine the right ascension of the ASC (RASC):

$$RASC = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ (ASC) \times COS\ e)$$

3. Compute the RAMC to RASC interval:

$$T = RASC - RAMC \qquad (\text{Add } 360^{o} \text{ if negative})$$

4. Compute the trisections of the diurnal and nocturnal arcs:

$$D = T \div 3$$

$$P = (T - 180^{o}) \div 3$$

5. Compute the RA of each of the house cusps:

$$RA_{11} = RAMC + D$$
$$RA_{12} = RA_{11} + D$$
$$RA_{2} = RASC + P$$
$$RA_{3} = RA_{2} + P$$

6. Compute the house cusp intervals as follows:

$$H_{11} = ARCCOT\ (-((TAN\ f \times COS\ e) + (SIN\ RA_{11} \times COS\ e)) \div COS\ RA_{11}$$
$$H_{12} = ARCCOT\ (-((TAN\ f \times COS\ e) + (SIN\ RA_{12} \times COS\ e)) \div COS\ RA_{12}$$
$$H_{2} = ARCCOT\ (-((TAN\ f \times COS\ e) + (SIN\ RA_{2} \times COS\ e)) \div COS\ RA_{2})$$
$$H_{3} = ARCCOT\ (-((TAN\ f \times COS\ e) + (SIN\ RA_{3} \times COS\ e)) \div COS\ RA_{3})$$

7. Compute the individual house cusps as follows:

$$C_{10} = MC \qquad C_{4} = 180^{o} + C_{10}$$
$$C_{11} = MC + H_{11} \qquad C_{5} = 180^{o} + C_{11}$$
$$C_{12} = MC + H_{12} \qquad C_{6} = 180^{o} + C_{12}$$
$$C_{1} = ASC \qquad C_{7} = 180^{o} + C_{1}$$
$$C_{2} = ASC + H_{2} \qquad C_{8} = 180^{o} + C_{2}$$
$$C_{3} = ASC + H_{3} \qquad C_{9} = 180^{o} + C_{3}$$

THE ARCTURAN HOUSE SYSTEM

This house system works very well in polar areas, but gives erratic and unpredictable results in the tropical regions.

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Determine the following constants for later usage:

   Compute the Decl. of the ASC: D = ARCSIN (SIN ASC x SIN e)
   Oblique Ascension of the East Point: J = RAMC + 90°
   G, the angle between the ecliptic and the horizon:
   G =ARCCOS ((SIN f x COS e) + (COS f x SIN e x COS J))
   K, the arc in degrees from the East Point to the ASC:
   K = ARCSIN (SIN D ÷ COS f)

3. Determine the house cusp intervals:

H_{10} = K + 90°	H_1 = K + 0° (or, 180°)
H_{11} = K + 60°	H_2 = K + 150°
H_{12} = K + 30°	H_3 = K + 120°

4. Determine the ecliptic to cusp angle:

   R_{10} = ARCTAN (COS G x TAN H_{10})
   R_{11} = ARCTAN (COS G x TAN H_{11})
   R_{12} = ARCTAN (COS G x TAN H_{12})
   R_1 = ARCTAN (COS G x TAN H_1)
   R_2 = ARCTAN (COS G x TAN H_2)
   R_3 = ARCTAN (COS G x TAN H_3)

5. Compute the individual house cusps as follows:

C_{10} = ASC - R_{10}	C_4 = 180° + C_{10}
C_{11} = ASC - R_{11}	C_5 = 180° + C_{11}
C_{12} = ASC - R_{12}	C_6 = 180° + C_{12}
C_1 = ASC - R_1	C_7 = 180° + C_1
C_2 = ASC - R_2	C_8 = 180° + C_2
C_3 = ASC - R_3	C_9 = 180° + C_3

THE CAMPANUS HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Determine the following house cusp intervals:

$H_{11} = 30^o$ $H_2 = 120^o$

$H_{12} = 60^o$ $H_3 = 150^o$

3. Compute an intermediate number:

J_{11} = ARCCOT (COS f x TAN H_{11}) J_2 = ARCCOT (COS f x TAN H_2)

J_{12} = ARCCOT (COS f x TAN H_{12}) J_3 = ARCCOT (COS f x TAN H_3)

4. Compute the Prime Vertical interval:

F_{11} = RAMC + 90° - J_{11} F_2 = RAMC + 90° - J_2

F_{12} = RAMC + 90° - J_{12} F_3 = RAMC + 90° - J_3

5. Compute the house cusp positions as follows:

P_{11} = ARCSIN (SIN H_{11} x SIN f) P_2 = ARCSIN (SIN H_2 x SIN f)

P_{12} = ARCSIN (SIN H_{12} x SIN f) P_3 = ARCSIN (SIN H_3 x SIN f)

6. Compute the associate angles as follows:

M_2 = ARCTAN (TAN P_2 ÷ COS F_2) M_3 = ARCTAN (TAN P_3 ÷ COS F_3)

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

7. Compute the ecliptic intervals:

R_{11} = ARCTAN ((TAN F_{11} x COS M_{11}) ÷ COS (M_{11} + e))

R_{12} = ARCTAN ((TAN F_{12} x COS M_{12}) ÷ COS (M_{12} + e))

R_2 = ARCTAN ((TAN F_2 x COS M_2) ÷ COS (M_2 + e))

R_3 = ARCTAN ((TAN F_3 x COS M_3) ÷ COS (M_3 + e))

8. Compute the individual house cusps as follows:

C_{10} =	MC	C_4 =	180° + C_{10}
C_{11} =	MC + R_{11}	C_5 =	180° + C_{11}
C_{12} =	MC + R_{12}	C_6 =	180° + C_{12}
C_1 =	ASC	C_7 =	180° + C_1
C_2 =	ASC + R_2	C_8 =	180° + C_2
C_3 =	ASC + R_3	C_9 =	180° + C_3

THE CLASSICAL HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Determine the First Cusp Locus Longitude:

$$L_1 = ASC - 5^o$$

3. Determine Right Ascension of the First Locus:

$$A_1 = RASC = ARCTAN (TAN\ L_1 \times COS\ e)$$

4. Determine the local hour angle of the MC:

$$t = ARCCOS\ (-((TAN\ f \times TAN\ e) \times SIN\ (A_1)))$$

5. Tri-sect the hour angle arcs:

$$g = t \div 3$$

$$h = (180^o - t) \div 3$$

6. Determine the right ascension of the tenth house cusp:

$$A_{10} = A_1 - t$$

7. Compute the house cusp positions as follows:

$$A_{11} = A_{10} + g$$
$$A_{12} = A_{11} + g$$
$$A_2 = A_1 + h$$
$$A_3 = A_2 + h$$

8. Compute the individual house cusps as follows:

$$C_{10} = ARCTAN (TAN\ A_{10} \div COS\ e) \qquad C_4 = 180^o + C_{10}$$
$$C_{11} = ARCTAN (TAN\ A_{11} \div COS\ e) \qquad C_5 = 180^o + C_{11}$$
$$C_{12} = ARCTAN (TAN\ A_{12} \div COS\ e) \qquad C_6 = 180^o + C_{12}$$
$$C_1 = ARCTAN (TAN\ A_1 \div COS\ e) \qquad C_7 = 180^o + C_1$$
$$C_2 = ARCTAN (TAN\ A_2 \div COS\ e) \qquad C_8 = 180^o + C_2$$
$$C_3 = ARCTAN (TAN\ A_3 \div COS\ e) \qquad C_9 = 180^o + C_3$$

THE HORIZONTAL HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Compute the P point:

$$P = \text{ARCTAN}\ (\text{TAN RAMC} \times \text{COS e})$$

3. Compute the angle between the horizon and the ecliptic:

$$G = \text{ARCSIN}\ (\text{COS f} \times \text{SIN}\ (\text{RAMC} + 90^{o})) \div \text{SIN ASC})$$

4. Compute:

$$J = \text{ASC} - P$$
$$K = \text{ARCTAN}\ (\text{TAN J} \times \text{COS G})$$

5. Assign the house cusp intervals:

$H_{10} = 90^{o}$	$H_{2} = 0^{o}$
$H_{11} = 60^{o}$	$H_{2} = -30^{o}$
$H_{12} = 30^{o}$	$H_{3} = -60^{o}$

6. Compute an intermediate result:

$M_{10} = H_{10} + K$	$M_{1} = H_{1} + K$
$M_{11} = H_{11} + K$	$M_{2} = H_{2} + K$
$M_{12} = H_{12} + K$	$M_{3} = H_{3} + K$

7. Compute the next intermediate result as follows:

$$R_{10} = \text{ARCTAN}\ (\text{TAN}\ M_{10} \div \text{COS G})$$
$$R_{11} = \text{ARCTAN}\ (\text{TAN}\ M_{11} \div \text{COS G})$$
$$R_{12} = \text{ARCTAN}\ (\text{TAN}\ M_{12} \div \text{COS G})$$
$$R_{1} = \text{ARCTAN}\ (\text{TAN}\ M_{1} \div \text{COS G})$$
$$R_{2} = \text{ARCTAN}\ (\text{TAN}\ M_{2} \div \text{COS G})$$
$$R_{3} = \text{ARCTAN}\ (\text{TAN}\ M_{3} \div \text{COS G})$$

THE KOCH HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner. Use the MC as the cusp of the tenth house.

2. Calculate the declination of the MC:
   D = ARCSIN (SIN MC x SIN e)

3. Calculate the ascensional difference of the MC:
   J = ARCSIN (TAN D x TAN f)

4. Calculate the oblique ascension of the MC:
   OAMC = RAMC - J

5. Calculate the general house cusp displacement interval:
   DX = ((RAMC + 90º) - OAMC) ÷ 3)
   (This should be a positive number; add 360º to any negative DX value)

6. Compute the house cusp positions as follows:

   H_{11} = (OAMC + DX - 90º)
   H_{12} = H_{11} + DX
   H_1 = H_{12} + DX
   H_2 = H_1 + DX
   H_3 = H_2 + DX

7. Calculate the individual house cusps:

   C_{11} = ARCCOT (- ((TAN f x SIN e) + (SIN H_{11} x COS e)) ÷ COS H_{11})
   C_{12} = ARCCOT (- ((TAN f x SIN e) + (SIN H_{12} x COS e)) ÷ COS H_{12})
   C_1 = ARCCOT (- ((TAN f x SIN e) + (SIN H_1 x COS e)) ÷ COS H_1)
   C_2 = ARCCOT (- ((TAN f x SIN e) + (SIN H_2 x COS e)) ÷ COS H_2)
   C_3 = ARCCOT (- ((TAN f x SIN e) + (SIN H_3 x COS e)) ÷ COS H_3)

THE MERIDIAN HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Determine the house cusp intervals:

$H_{10} = 0^o$ $H_1 = 90^o$
$H_{11} = 30^o$ $H_2 = 120^o$
$H_{12} = 60^o$ $H_3 = 150^o$

3. Determine the ecliptic interval point for each cusp:

$F_{10} = RAMC + H_{10}$
$F_{11} = RAMC + H_{11}$
$F_{12} = RAMC + H_{12}$
$F_1 = RAMC + H_1$
$F_2 = RAMC + H_2$
$F_3 = RAMC + H_3$

4. Compute the house cusps:

$C_{10} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_{10} \div COS\ e)$
$C_{11} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_{11} \div COS\ e)$
$C_{12} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_{12} \div COS\ e)$
$C_1 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_1 \div COS\ e)$
$C_2 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_2 \div COS\ e)$
$C_3 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_3 \div COS\ e)$

5. Determine the individual house cusps as follows:

$C_{10} = C_{10}$ $C_4 = 180^o + C_{10}$
$C_{11} = C_{11}$ $C_5 = 180^o + C_{11}$
$C_{12} = C_{12}$ $C_6 = 180^o + C_{12}$
$C_1 = C_1$ $C_7 = 180^o + C_1$

THE MORINUS HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Determine the house cusp intervals:

$H_{10} = 0^o$ $H_1 = 90^o$
$H_{11} = 30^o$ $H_2 = 120^o$
$H_{12} = 60^o$ $H_3 = 150^o$

3. Determine the ecliptic interval point for each cusp:

$F_{10} = RAMC + H_{10}$
$F_{11} = RAMC + H_{11}$
$F_{12} = RAMC + H_{12}$
$F_1 = RAMC + H_1$
$F_2 = RAMC + H_2$
$F_3 = RAMC + H_3$

4. Compute the house cusps:

$C_{10} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_{10} \times COS\ e)$
$C_{11} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_{11} \times COS\ e)$
$C_{12} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_{12} \times COS\ e)$
$C_1 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_1 \times COS\ e)$
$C_2 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_2 \times COS\ e)$
$C_3 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ F_3 \times COS\ e)$

5. Determine the individual house cusps as follows:

$C_{10} = C_{10}$ $C_4 = 180^o + C_{10}$
$C_{11} = C_{11}$ $C_5 = 180^o + C_{11}$
$C_{12} = C_{12}$ $C_6 = 180^o + C_{12}$
$C_1 = C_1$ $C_7 = 180^o + C_1$
$C_2 = C_2$ $C_8 = 180^o + C_2$
$C_3 = C_3$ $C_9 = 180^o + C_3$

THE NATURAL HOURS HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner.

2. Determine the times of sunrise and sunset for the location of the chart. You can consult your local newspaper, tables in the "Nautical Almanac", or using a table of ascendants and MC's determine what clock time during the day the Sun's degree would be conjunct the ASC and the DSC. Finally, if you wish to calculate that information astronomically, you can also do that, but I am not providing those formulas or methods here because they can become too tricky, especially in polar latitudes where the Sun doesn't rise or set during every 24 hour period.

3. Suppose you determine that there are twelve hours and thirty-six minutes of daylight, and, thus eleven hours and twenty-four minutes of night for the day of the event at your event location. Then convert these hours and minutes to arcs of a circle as follows:

12H 36M = 12.6 Hrs ((12.6 ÷ 24) x 360°) = 189° of daylight arc
360 - 189 = 171° of night time arc

4. Compute the cuspal increments:

D = 189° ÷ 6 = 31° 30′ for the daylight increment
N = 171° ÷ 6 = 28° 30′ for the night time increment

5. Compute the house cusps:

C_{12} = ASC - D
C_{11} = C_{12} - D
C_{10} = C_{11} - D
C_9 = C_{10} - D
C_8 = C_9 - D
C_7 = C_8 - D
C_1 = ASC
C_2 = ASC + N
C_3 = C_2 + N
C_4 = C_3 + N
C_5 = C_4 + N
C_6 = C_5 + N

THE PLACIDIAN HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the usual manner. Use the MC as the cusp of the tenth house and the ASC as the cusp of the first house. This is a fast converging algorithm adapted from M. Vijayaraghavulu.

2. Determine the following house cusp intervals:

H_{11} = RAMC + 30° H_2 = RAMC + 120°

H_{12} = RAMC + 60° H_3 = RAMC + 150°

3. Set the Semi-arc ratios:

F_{11} = 1 ÷ 3 F_2 = 2 ÷ 3

F_{12} = 2 ÷ 3 F_3 = 1 ÷ 3

4. Compute the cuspal declinations:

D_{11} = ARCSIN (SIN e x SIN H_{11}) D_2 = ARCSIN (SIN e x SIN H_2)

D_{12} = ARCSIN (SIN e x SIN H_{12}) D_3 = ARCSIN (SIN e x SIN H_3)

5. Compute the first intermediate values:

A_{11} = F_{11} x (ARCSIN (TAN f x TAN D_{11}))

A_{12} = F_{12} x (ARCSIN (TAN f x TAN D_{12}))

A_2 = F_2 x (ARCSIN (TAN f x TAN D_2))

A_3 = F_3 x (ARCSIN (TAN f x TAN D_3))

6. Compute the house cusp positions as follows:

M_{11} = ARCTAN (SIN A_{11} ÷ (COS H_{11} x TAN D_{11}))

M_3 = ARCTAN (SIN A_3 ÷ (COS H_3 x TAN D_3))

7. Compute the intermediate house cusps:

R_{11} = ARCTAN ((TAN H_{11} x COS M_{11}) ÷ COS (M_{11} + e))

R_{12} = ARCTAN ((TAN H_{12} x COS M_{12}) ÷ COS (M_{12} + e))

R_2 = ARCTAN ((TAN H_2 x COS M_2) ÷ COS (M_2 + e))

R_3 = ARCTAN ((TAN H_3 x COS M_3) ÷ COS (M_3 + e))

8. Substitute: D_{11} = R_{11}; D_{12} = R_{12}; D_2 = R_2; and D_3 = R_3. Then repeat steps 5 thru 8 again. Substitute the R's for the D's a third time and repeat steps 5 thru 8. The answer for R on the third try is the cusp you desire.

9. Compute the individual house cusps as follows:

$C_{11} = R_{11}$ $C_5 = 180^o + C_{11}$

$C_{12} = R_{12}$ $C_6 = 180^o + C_{12}$

$C_2 = R_2$ $C_8 = 180^o + C_2$

$C_3 = R_3$ $C_9 = 180^o + C_3$

THE REGIOMONTANUS HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner. Use the MC as the cusp of the tenth house and the ASC as the cusp of the first house.

2. Determine the following house cusp intervals:

$H_{11} = 30^o$ $H_2 = 120^o$

$H_{12} = 60^o$ $H_3 = 150^o$

3. Set the equatorial intervals:

$F_{11} = RAMC + H_{11}$ $F_2 = RAMC + H_2$

$F_{12} = RAMC + H_{12}$ $F_3 = RAMC + H_3$

4. Compute the house poles:

$P_{11} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ f \times SIN\ H_{11})$ $P_2 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ f \times SIN\ H_2)$

$P_{12} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ f \times SIN\ H_{12})$ $P_3 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ f \times SIN\ H_3)$

5. Compute the first intermediate values:

$M_{11} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ P_{11} \div COS\ F_{11})$

$M_{12} = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ P_{12} \div COS\ F_{12})$

$M_2 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ P_2 \div COS\ F_2)$

$M_3 = ARCTAN\ (TAN\ P_3 \div COS\ F_3)$

6. Compute the intermediate house cusps:

$R_{11} = ARCTAN\ ((TAN\ F_{11} \times COS\ M_{11}) \div COS\ (M_{11} + e))$

$R_{12} = ARCTAN\ ((TAN\ F_{12} \times COS\ M_{12}) \div COS\ (M_{12} + e))$

$R_2 = ARCTAN\ ((TAN\ F_2 \times COS\ M_2) \div COS\ (M_2 + e))$

$R_3 = ARCTAN\ ((TAN\ F_3 \times COS\ M_3) \div COS\ (M_3 + e))$

7. Compute the individual house cusps as follows:

$C_{10} = MC$ $C_4 = 180^o + C_{10}$

$C_{11} = R_{11}$ $C_5 = 180^o + C_{11}$

$C_{12} = R_{12}$ $C_6 = 180^o + C_{12}$

$C_1 = ASC$ $C_7 = 180^o + C_1$

$C_2 = R_2$ $C_8 = 180^o + C_2$

$C_3 = R_3$ $C_9 = 180^o + C_3$

THE TOPOCENTRIC HOUSE SYSTEM

1. Compute the RAMC, MC, and ASC in the normal manner. Use the MC as the cusp of the tenth house and the ASC as the cusp of the first house.

2. Determine the following house cusp intervals:

H_{11} = RAMC + 30° H_2 = RAMC + 120°

H_{12} = RAMC + 60° H_3 = RAMC + 150°

3. Set the Semi-arc ratios:

P_{11} = ARCTAN (TAN f ÷ 3)

P_{12} = ARCTAN (2 x (TAN f ÷ 3))

P_2 = ARCTAN (2 x (TAN f ÷ 3))

P_3 = ARCTAN (TAN f ÷ 3)

4. Compute the intermediate angle M:

M_{11} = ARCTAN (TAN P_{11} ÷ COS H_{11}) M_2 = ARCTAN (TAN P_2 ÷ COS H_2)

M_{12} = ARCTAN (TAN P_{12} ÷ COS H_{12}) M_3 = ARCTAN (TAN P_3 ÷ COS H_3)

5. Compute the intermediate house cusps:

R_{11} = ARCTAN ((TAN H_{11} x COS M_{11}) ÷ COS (M_{11} + e))

R_{12} = ARCTAN ((TAN H_{12} x COS M_{12}) ÷ COS (M_{12} + e))

R_2 = ARCTAN ((TAN H_2 x COS M_2) ÷ COS (M_2 + e))

R_3 = ARCTAN ((TAN H_3 x COS M_3) ÷ COS (M_3 + e))

6. Compute the individual house cusps as follows:

C_{10} = MC C_4 = 180° + C_{10}

C_{11} = R_{11} C_5 = 180° + C_{11}

C_{12} = R_{12} C_6 = 180° + C_{12}

C_1 = ASC C_7 = 180° + C_1

C_2 = R_2 C_8 = 180° + C_2

C_3 = R_3 C_9 = 180° + C_3

A variation of this system, devised by Alexander Marr of Germany to give 8 cusps instead of the 12 normally used, requires changing steps 2 and 3 above as follows:

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Substitute: H_a = RAMC + 45° H_b = RAMC + 135°
P_a = P_b = ARCTAN (TAN f ÷ 2) & then recalculate

This gives a cusp with mid-point like qualities which Mr. Marr claims produces interesting correspondences. Investigation recommended.

Appendix D

KEYWORDS BY SIGNIFICANT TOPIC HEADINGS

Quadrant Key Ideas

First Quadrant
(The Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Houses)

Inception:

The act of starting or beginning, acquiring the stimulation necessary to begin hard work
Source, derivation, fountain, origin
Root, well, wellspring
Initial, beginning, incipient, introductory
The nurturing or encouragement for what you want to do or plan to do
The process of self-motivation, getting yourself in gear, inspiration

Origins:

The initial thrust, the start, the results of your upbringing, the influences you allow your parents to have over you
Your childhood, early childhood conditioning received
Entry, the predisposition of your instincts
Familial, the influences we gained from our home life
The growth and development of your instinct mechanism
The birth of your ideas

Preparations:

Your entry into the working environment, how you will work for what you expect, preparations for living you make, involvement
Developing, the influence your teachers have upon you
The development of basic sympathies, developing likes and dislikes
Stimulating experiences, experiences which help you grow
The beginning of self-application, acquiring new skills
Situations created when we seek love, or acceptance, how experiences affect us, working through pre-natal emotional responses

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Searching for love or acceptance, experiences with love, your behavior or conduct in trying to obtain love, emotional accentuation
The gathering or storing of emotional resources
Sensing, becoming a conduit for the feelings of others
Feeling, feeling what has to be done

Regenerate:

Regenerate, refresh, renew, revive, reinvigorate
The start of a climb from a low point
Causing something to be brought into existence again

Developing:

Reactions to things which occur in your environment, learning to mature
Learning to set up a base and then grow from that which you are setting up for yourself in life
The means through which you develop a more secure base or foundation to work out of
The development of good work and play habits
Development of your self-image through family or play or work associations
Development of the tools or materials of life which you need

Starting:

Finding your potential
Laying the foundation or framework
The initial thrust, beginning
The start, putting into action, introducing
Originating, finding new ideas or courses of action
The seeking out of information

Sustaining:

Where you get your nourishment from
Learning to provide nourishment for yourself, providing the support for your ideas and existence
Determining what your personal needs and/or preferences are Consolidating, gathering, the gathering of resources
Gathering support for your ideas from others
Confirming where you can get help from others for the types of support you will need

Connecting:

Development of the relationship(s) between the parts of your ideas or objectives
Creating your own opportunities
A more outward use of your talents to bring others along at the expense of yourself
Providing for the communication of your ideas and thoughts

SECOND QUADRANT
(The Seventh, Eighth, and Ninth Houses)

Growth:

Learning to acquire and use what you must (people, things, etc.) to help you accomplish your goals
Your ascent into consciousness, development of sufficient spiritual strength to sustain yourself
Your efforts at conscious adaptation to living in the world
Learning to grow from out of your base of consciousness
Gradual and progressive change or development
The process of development toward maturity, specialization
Development, the formation of ideas previously expressed The process of working your ideas out
Evolvement, advancing towards perfection, flowering, upgrowth
Progress, moving onward with your ideas and schemes
Unfolding, the assimilation of experience

Social Endeavors:

Development of your sense of inter-social dependency, involvements in the world of others, formal encounters with others, seeking others out
Determination of your role and/or function within society
Your development as a social being
Your usefulness to society
Learning about the structure of society within which you live
How you develop as a person who can be useful to society
Acceptance of responsibility for helping society to progress
The results of your social endeavors Your social realm

Dependency:

Development of your interdependency needs with others
Employment of resources obtained from others
Learning to work with others
The bonds of loyalty you build with others

Improving:

Sharpening your skills, learning, re-doing
Preparing yourself for action
Learning to think in accordance with what others expect
The combining of different processes and systems into and with your own interests
Acquiring knowledge, gaining in understanding

Evolving:

A movement toward a pattern which is part of a larger whole, development of your ideas and methods, evolution
Unfolding, the making known of one's plans or purposes, disclosing, revealing what must be done, the opening up of paths for progress
Meeting those who will help you in your work
Making mistakes, learning from your mistakes
Enlarging, the broadening of your work base, expansion of your plans and ideas to a larger scale
Elaborate, the complication of simple ideas, statement of your objectives in a more detailed form, development of work plans in greater detail
Development from a simple to a more complex form
Formatting
The development of talent(s)

Supporting:

The gathering of support from others for your work and your ideas
Advertisement of your intentions, the gathering of support as a result of this advertisement
Seeking of maintenance, the development of a backup plan
Seeking support with your speeches, writings, or publishing before the educated masses Relating

THIRD QUADRANT
(The Tenth, Eleventh, and Twelfth Houses)

Attainment:

Gaining through your own efforts, seeing or recognizing what it is you must do to gain the recognition you seek Seeing your accomplishments, where you meet what you have been working towards Reaching, achieving, arriving or coming at that which you have been working toward, reaching out for your goal
Your acceptance or receipt of the results of your endeavors
What you have prepared for yourself, specialization
The making or breaking of your reputation on what it is that you are working toward, the quality of your reputation in this regard
Actualizing, making your goals realistic
Accomplishing, your sense of having arrived
Fruition, coming to fulfillment, realization Outer application, applying the ideas or goals that you have been working toward

Responsibility:

Your acceptance of some responsibility for helping society to progress
Extending yourself and your commitments, achieving a degree of dependability
Becoming accountable for your actions, answerable
Your sense of obligation towards your duties, development of rationality
Development of the ability to distinguish right from wrong
Assumption of one's duties or obligations

Endeavor:

The efforts you put forth to grow in the world because of the talents or experiences you have or can offer
The outward use of your talents to bring others along at the expense of yourself or others
Attempts, trying, struggles, labor, loads
Exertion, pains, toil

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Using:

Consolidating, bringing together all of the personal resources you have been developing
The use of these resources, formation of your own efforts
Creation of the means to press forward with your ideas
Acquiring, getting, locating, finding
The identity fully forming in social expression
Efforts to bring the world into relationship with yourself

Accomplishment:

Seeing what you have been working for come into being Happen, come off, be put into production, transpire
The results of your actions as expressed within your environment the karmic results of your work
The development of talent(s)
Progression to a higher or more complex form
Maturing, mellowing, ripening

Concession:

Admission, the acknowledgement of the truth of what one has done
Appeasement, reconciliation
Capitulation, a giving in to change
Indulgence, letting others have their way with your ideas or work
Endorsement, acknowledgement of the spread of your work or ideas

Failure:

The suggestion of failure if adequate preparation has not been made
Having to face the possibility of failure, facing the possibility that you may not succeed in what it is that you are trying to accomplish
A breakdown in operation or function
Consequences for neglect or omission

Universalizing:

Trying to see what good there is for all mankind
Making your work good for all, the adaptation of your ideas and efforts to that which is good or useful to all

Finishing:

Completing that which has to be done
The total use of your talents or resources

FOURTH QUADRANT
(The First, Second, and Third Houses)

Adaptation:

The natural outgrowth of self based upon what has already transpired
Your self-awareness in adapting to the ideas and goods of others
Opportunities to develop the non-physical as well as the physical self Growth, the kind of growth which comes from the contemplation of what you can or have done with your life
Development of the inner or spiritual side of self, life sustaining functions
Development of the shadow side of your nature
That which you must learn to add to your collective nature
Materialistic concerns, how you are able to capitalize on what you have done
The creation of defense mechanisms, personal reactions to what you have done
Your natural abilities to meet the challenges of life
An increase in personal flexibility, the internal way you deal with others
Accommodation, the subordinating of something for personal growth of self Adjustment, a change in self to produce a better adaptation to one's new surroundings
Conforming to the different sequences in one's environment

Style:

Development of one's likes and dislikes, how one responds to their immediate environment because of their likes and dislikes
Review of your method of operation
Developing the power of your personality in communication with others
Development of a personal manner of expression, specific execution, the personal way in which you do things

Recognition:

Recognition of selfhood, learning to know and understand self better
Awareness, determining the role of yourself in the world
Acknowledgement of what has been accomplished
Gratitude, appreciation
Formal acknowledgement of one's attainment(s)
Identification of self with a set of accomplishments

Reconsideration:

Conscious or unconscious thinking about what it is that you must do or grow in life for Re-employing, reusing of wasted or unused force or energies
To consider again, to review, to think over in the sense of trying to determine if something should be changed

Withdrawal:

Move back, retire, retreat, remove oneself, removal of the work that you have done, a loss of recognition
Go, leave, quit, depart
To take out of existence, giving up on the use of Concerns with preservation of the self Concession, removal from use or consideration

Reflection:

An expression or learning which comes from years of experience
Contemplation, thinking it all over
Study, weigh, meditate upon, thoughtful study
Reflect upon, ponder, think about
Summation, taking stock of yourself

Renewal:

Replacement of that which has been misused or worn out, the introduction of new or fresh ideas
Changing your outlook, a new outlook
Restore, to be born again, making new again, causing to exist again, reestablishing what has been done before, reviving, resuming Reestablish, bringing it all back into use again

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Reforming, improving, bringing it back to the way it used to be, restoring to a former or original condition
Learning things which you can add to your collective self

Orientation:

Bringing self back into harmony with one's ultimate standards or principles
Familiarization with the environment, adaptation of what one has done with the environment or surrounds that one finds themselves placed in Bringing one's work or ideas in harmony with the universal forces
Self-Mastery

Dissemination:

Telling others of the nature or usefulness of your ideas or efforts
Communicating to others what has been done, your documentation
Spreading knowledge that you have gained to others

Intuition:

Development of an awareness of your surroundings
The ability to meld together various sensory inputs into a cohesive and continuing fragment of consciousness

Hemisphere Key Ideas

LEFT HEMISPHERE

Free Will:

The expression of your individual will
An expression of your individual free will
What you are able to build or do for yourself

Observing:

Projection, projection of self into public situations
Observing the actions of others and learning from these

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Developing a broad relatedness to others
Learning how to read and use feedback from others for personal development
Your thought and reaction patterns, the growth you go through because of what others do to you

Participation:

Relating to others
Gathering and interpreting feedback from others on your actions
Alienation from the world or others in general

Action:

Personal aggressiveness, the amount of self-control you have Assertive self-interests
Activity, personal activity, being an action oriented person
Initiates, induces self to begin efforts with self or others
Starts, begins, orients self towards production
Creates their own reality

Rethinking:

Thinking again about the effect that you have on others
Retreating within yourself to assess your impact on others or circumstances in general, withdrawal into the self for contemplation
The energies which the self has to channel and mold
How you are influenced by what others do to you
Awakening, the dawning of light and consciousness

Self-Expression:

Intensification within, the development of yourself as an individual
Everything that is related to your concept of self
Concern for self, ego emphasis, your forms of self-preservation Ego development, developing your free will Your psychological and mental interests, self-manifestation
Your self-interests
Your egocentric or individualistic traits
The quality of personal security which you have Development of your personal potential, your efforts to stand as an individual

RIGHT HEMISPHERE

Experiencing:

Give and take, causing others to react in the ways which you desire, meeting or encountering others, reactions through others
Seeking equivalent returns from others, returns
Seeking the help or advice of others
Encountering circumstances which involve your destiny or reason for being Interaction with others, getting others involved (or vice-versa), how you react to others and their demands
Experiencing intensification of life outside of the self or without self-involvement
Growing through experiences with others, gaining experience in life
What life demands from you in terms of experience and interaction
Confrontation with the needs of others, where you came into contact with the world's demands
Reactions, reacting, reactive

External Events:

Things which go on outside of the small environment which you normally confine yourself to, that which is happening
Exchange, communications with others
Your search for the fulfillment of your destiny within society
Human society (in general), other people
Societal structures built by man, the economic necessities of society
Learning about the world, what the world offers you
Duties you are given or accept towards society
Ways in which you try to affect your world, results

Co-operation:

Cooperating with others, objective unions with others, co-operating, learning to co-operate, resolves
Coming together with others to share social experiences
Forcing cooperation with others, relating to others
A need to work through others, face to face encounters with others, your efforts to answer the needs of society
Controlling one's responses to the experiences noted in order to gain more control and/or responsibility for one's actions
The use of tact in achieving one's aims

The need for balance between personal feelings and attachments
Social requirements for partnerships which must be attended to by reason and cooperation
Reacting in a controlled and intentional manner
Alienation from self and your needs

LOWER HEMISPHERE

Development:

Personal concerns, those things which are of interest to you or your family, family focus, your sense of activity orientation
Building your personal creativeness, increasing your productiveness
Staying within your own needs, looking after your own needs first
The preparations you make so you can go out into the world
Development of your senses of personal honor and trust
Helping others to develop
Personal development directed toward self-realization and self-expression
The process of unfolding to develop yourself, seeing your relationships with others primarily through how these can develop the self
Learning to grow from what you are able to learn from life
Deep and reflective reactions
Efforts to bring yourself to a point where you can work with others, the process of existence, being, subjective thinking or acting

Integration:

Building on skills and values which you have learned early in life, experiencing the self through activity, acting out and experiencing yourself
Personal integration, recognition of how to bring together and use the inherent power which you have Taking what you have learned from your family environment and learning to apply this in your own life
Preparing for relationships
Yin factors which affect the formation of your character
To actualize as fully as possible the potentials in you at birth
Subconscious functioning
The process of finding "self", your subjective consciousness of self Inner directed, contemplates

Common Sense:

The building and guiding of your common sense, dealing with the ephemeral aspects of life
The use of common sense to get you through life
An accumulation of self-awareness What comes to you in the form of useful things or relationships
Instinctive reactions, impulsive reactions, actions done in reflex
Where you digest and ponder the impressions you receive about life

Privacy:

Involvement in your own personal life and/or affairs, an inclination towards secretive actions
Your subconscious needs for protection and security, where you look to find fulfillment of your needs for security and safety
Withdrawal from the public view, secrecy, a tendency towards being withdrawn and remote
Using your creations to contribute to your security
Subjective feelings which protect and ensure your foundations for survival
Having goals of sustenance
Finding and keeping nourishment
Personal resources
Matriarchal concerns, motherly concerns, the rearing of children
The symbolism of events which occur primarily at the psychological or unconscious level
Self to self

Learning:

Learning through the different areas of life which you must go through Development of your intelligence
Learning to exert personal control over your actions
Doing what you are told to do

Indirect:

Learning and/or absorbing through the means other than conscious

Subjective:

That which is subjective

UPPER HEMISPHERE

Prominence:

The limelight, being in the social limelight
The natural sense of authority which you have Arriving at significant achievements, social prominence
Getting recognition, being thrust into the limelight, public recognition
Where you are most visible and vulnerable in the eye of the public, events which occur in the open, visible events
Pinnacles
Outer directed, acts directly

Exposure:

Externalization, encountering more objective situations
Self-realization within your public experience
Exposure of your self-development
Yang factors which affect the development of your character
Public exposure, learning how to come into contact with those who can help you
Social and communal integration, recognizing the power you have within society
Well defined roles, well defined objectives and/or alliances
Finding your place within the organized processes of life, actions taken to find your way in society
Use of your previously developed social skills
How you use your personal honors
Realizing the development of the exposure which comes from meeting and interacting with others
The development of purposeful relationships
Feedback

Self-Assuredness:

Building a sense of assurance about yourself, the self-esteem you can or are able to build
Recognizing your position in the world
Building a self-aware personality
Career development, getting the right education
Getting the right contacts
Getting the right resources that you need

 © 2002 All Rights Reserved

Getting the right experiences
Developing and/or using your leadership abilities, the manner in which you go about demanding your rights

Functioning:

The process of functioning in the world, making what you want to do visible and noticed
The increase of your ability to gather power among others
Interacting

Perception:

What you see and perceive from life, imagined positions or postures
How you analyze what life is and what it has to offer
How you are able to seize upon the impressions you receive

Expressing:

The expression of self and its needs to the world
Experiencing, where you consciously experience life
The theories of life you develop for yourself, sharing these theories with the world
How you are or are not able to tie yourself to reality

Goal Setting and Seeking:

Your drives for power or honor, drives for recognition
Fulcrums, turning points
Paternal concerns, development of the fathering side of your nature
The plans you set for yourself, the activities you perform
What you do to stand out from the world
The courage you have to step before the world
The results obtained from co-operation and/or sharing Participation in processes where more that self is concerned

BIBLIOGRAPHY

References and Sources

The keywords found in this book were gathered over a twenty-three year period from over 600 sources such as astrological articles, books, lectures, private discussions, personal letters, etc. Most of these sources provided less than ten words or ideas. However, references listed below proved more useful. The bulk (over 95%) of the words in this book were created from the thesaurus and dictionary sources cited. My apologies for being unable to list all sources and persons involved in this comprehensive project. Grateful thanks to all those unmentioned people, living and dead, who find their ideas listed in this book. The Rulership Book was not used a word source for the material in this book, but it did provide significant inspiration and impetus for creating a more useable keyword product and format.
